April wholesale prices jump .8%

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The administration's rosy 1976 economic picture faded Thursday when the Labor Dept. reported that a one-year record rise in farm and food prices drove wholesale prices up 0.8 per cent in April.

The increase, a nearly double-digit annual rate of 9.6 per cent, indicated another surge of inflation for grocery shoppers. Economists also believe more people were out of work in April.

These developments posed problems for President Ford as he defends his economic policies on the campaign trail. Ford claims credit for the recent upturn, including bringing inflation in this first quarter to a four-year low.

FORD'S TOP economic advisor, William Seidman, acknowledged in an interview that prices will not hold at low levels. But he insisted inflation this year will be below 1975.

"The President is always worried about a resurgence of inflation," said White House spokesman Ron Nessen. "(But) it doesn't have to happen and it isn't anticipated it will happen."

Nessen said the White House had "early indications" that May price rises would be less: Seidman indicated he was unaware of those reports.

April's price surge ended a five-month lull. The upward trend was expected to continue as manufacturers collect increases already announced for steel, aluminum, copper, lead and wood products.

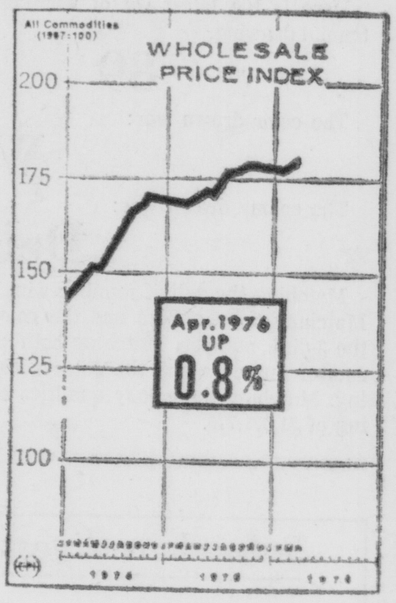

ALTHOUGH METALS prices began climbing in April, industrial prices showed only a 0.3 per cent rise. Combined farm and processed food prices rose 2.8 per cent — the biggest leap since April, 1975.

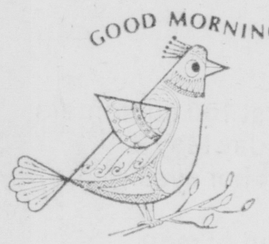

Livestock, eggs and coffee led a 4.2 per cent rise in farm prices, the biggest in nearly a year. Beef and veal forced processed food and feed prices up 1.9 per cent. Not since November 1974, have processed foods risen so fast.

Seidman said there is no reason to doubt Agriculture Sec. Earl Butz' estimate of a 3 to 4 per cent increase in food prices in 1976.

The Wholesale Price Index in April stood at 181.3, up 5.3 per cent from a year ago. That means wholesale goods costing $100 in 1967 now cost $181.30. The index for farm products was 8.6 per cent higher than a year ago; for industrial goods it was up 6.1 per cent.

Wholesale prices dropped by a compound rate of 1.8 per cent in the first quarter of 1976, while consumer prices rose 2.3 per cent, the smallest rise in nearly four years.

JOSEPH SCARAVILLI, 17, and Peter A. Prohaska, 20, of Buffalo Grove were reported in fair condition Thursday afternoon at Northwest Community Hospital after the station wagon driven by Scaravilli struck the rear of a truck on Dundee Road at Kennicott Avenue in Arlington Heights. Police said Salavatore D. Maltese, right, of Chicago parked the truck in the right lane with its warning lights on when he went to ask for directions at a nearby gas station. No tickets were issued pending further investigation.

Village awarded $134,000 in federal funds

by BILL HILL

The Village of Arlington Heights was notified Thursday that its application for $134,000 in community development funds has been approved by the U.S. Dept. of Housing and Urban Development.

The funds will be used to purchase two parcels at the northeast corner of Sigwalt Street and Vail Avenue where a parking garage is proposed.

Arlington Heights will now be eligible to apply for $295,000 next year and more than $400,000 in each of the following three years.

THE VILLAGE board in 1975 voted not to apply for the community development funds because of possible "strings" attached to the program, but this year voted 5 to 3 to apply for them.

Opposition again centered mainly on the HUD requirement that a housing assistance plan accompany the village's application.

The housing plan calls for 125 units of low-and moderate-income housing

Fans mob singer-star, some trampled in crush

Screaming fans Thursday afternoon mobbed John Travolta when their actor-singer idol visited Woodfield Shopping Center, and in the crush several persons were trampled and two juveniles arrested.

Interview with Travolta — Sec. 2, Page 12

The 22-year-old star of "Welcome Back, Kotter" escorted by a half-dozen policemen, entered Woodfield's Grand Court in a speaking and autographing appearance. An estimated 15,000 to 20,000 teens and young adults awaited him.

While Travolta spoke, the crowd stayed orderly. But once he finished and stepped down to sign autographs, police reportedly started to disperse the crowd.

The screaming crowd responded by surging forward, witnesses said. A disc jockey who shared the spotlight with Travolta stumbled and fell, but a policeman pulled him to safety. Others weren't so lucky.

Deborah Mitchell, 18, of Streamwood, was treated and released at Alexian Brothers Medical Center, Elk Grove Village, for bruises on her head, ankle and neck after she reportedly fell and was trampled.

During the melee, police arrested two juveniles on charges of aggravated battery, resisting arrest and disorderly conduct. A patrolman suffered a cut finger and was treated and released at Northwest Community Hospital, Arlington Heights.

Firefighters save stuck starling

A bird in the tree is worth a fire truck on the street.

That's what three Arlington Heights boys learned this week when the Arlington Heights Fire Dept. sent a snorkel truck and men to rescue a starling entwined in kite string atop an elm tree.

Robert Cook, 11, of Arlington Heights, a student at South Jr. High School, first saw the bird Tuesday. He alerted his friends Peter and Patrick Johnston, both 11, students at Our Lady of the Wayside School, who tried sawing off the twig where the trapped bird sat.

When their sawing efforts failed, a third friend called the Arlington Heights Fire Dept. which dispatched a truck to the Sigwalt Street and Ridge Avenue elm tree. There a fireman climbed a ladder to the tree and cut the kite string.

A fishy fad—or, what you don't see is what you get

Today

Mike Klein's people

This is a sad story that I write today, the heart-tugging demise of the Invisible Piranha, the fish that would as soon eat you as look at you.

It all began harmlessly one day. Stan Leitner of St. Louis, who inserts a pipe between his mustache and beard, sat pondering how to reinvest the gains from his Stud Rock, who shall be called Sam.

Pet Rocks assaulted the gift market last year. Then Stan came forward with Sam. "He had sexual connotations," said Stan. "He was a rock for breeding."

Sam sold well. But then nobody wanted any more Sams molesting their Pet Rocks. All the Love Rocks refused to change color around Sam. It was a bad situation.

Stan got thinking and finally decided to invent his invisible piranhas.

THE CONCEPT was simple: All-out, painful revenge. Piranhas would strike terror into every septic system investigator, every dog who chased a river raft.

"You could use it for getting even with whoever was doing the dishes or put it into your mother-in-law's bath water," advised Stan during a telephone conversation this week.

The piranhas would be sold at $4 apiece, although they bring slightly more at P.J.'s Trick Shop in the Randhurst Shopping Center where Phil Johnson keeps watch over all sorts of absurdity.

"They used to have invisible goldfish," said Phil "I remember years ago, I put water in the bowl. Women would come in and say, 'I see him breathing in there, but I don't see him.' "

WHEN YOU PURCHASE invisible piranhas from Phil, the capital outlay buys a box with tooth marks, a bowl, the human skeleton of a piranha victim and numerous invisible piranhas.

Stan insisted the skeleton is genuine human bones, although it appeared plastic to my untrained eyes. But what do I know about such things?

"There's a witch doctor in south St. Louis who provides those," Stan said.

An enclosed manual tells the new owner that the piranha enjoys live food, such as cows, sheep and spaghetti.

Cows are big creatures and coaxing one into the bowl might be difficult. Stan's book advises, "Grease cow thoroughly!"

Even this might not be good enough. You might entice the cow by placing grass inside the bowl.

THE INVISIBLE piranha made his debut during the New York Gift Show in February. Stan said the piranha was a gift show smash, grossing $50,000 in three days. That's lotsa piranhas.

The whole world wanted one. Television talk shows beckoned for them. There were orders from Canada, Europe and New Zealand.

Almost 75,000 invisible piranhas were sold within three months. They ate record amounts of unwanted living things. But now the bottom has fallen out.

"It's the swan song for invisible piranha," Stan lamented. "But it was an interesting ride."

Stan was not dependent upon invisible piranha to finance his family and put kids through college. He also draws a nationally syndicated cartoon strip for the Des Moines Register and Tribune newspapers.

THE INVISIBLE piranhas were just something to make money. "The idea," said Stan, "was to create a farce and see if it had any commercial appeal."

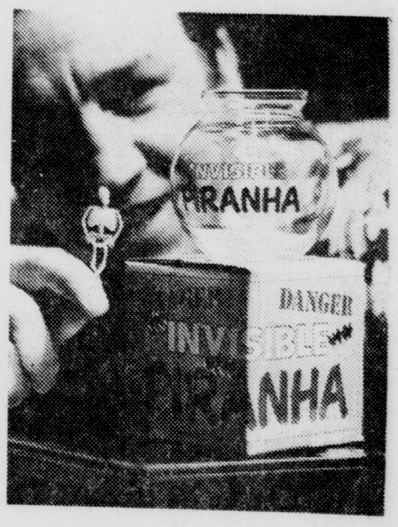

Now, Stan has gotten busy on other projects. There will be something around Christmas which features a canister of dead flies and a swatter with holes. But he did not go much further.

That's because he's concerned for my safety.

"I am being watched very closely by the Russians and Red Chinese," said Stan. "They might take you someplace and torture you until you told them what they want to know.

"With my high profile," said Stan, "they obviously can't do that."

Besides, he would probably lead them into a bowl full of invisible piranhas.

Blaze guts cafe; arson suspected

Arson is suspected as the cause of a fire Thursday that gutted the Prospect House restaurant, 6 E. Northwest Hwy., Mount Prospect. Firemen estimated damage to the building and furnishings at $15,000. Firefighters launched an arson investigation after flammable liquid was found in the eating area and back room of the restaurant, which was closed at the time of the 5 p.m. blaze. Firefighters said the front plate-glass window of the cafe was blown out. The cafe is operated by Harry Pappas of Palatine.

747 freighter mud-bound

An American Airlines 747 freighter slid off an east-west runway at O'Hare Airport Thursday afternoon, damaging its landing gear and sinking into mud. The runway was closed, and airport crews worked late Thursday night to free the 550,000-pound craft. The plane, carrying general air freight, landed on a rain-slicked runway shortly before 3 p.m., but became mired in mud from a drenching all-day rain when it tried to turn onto a taxiway. Airport employes unloaded some of the cargo to lighten the plane before trying to tow it.

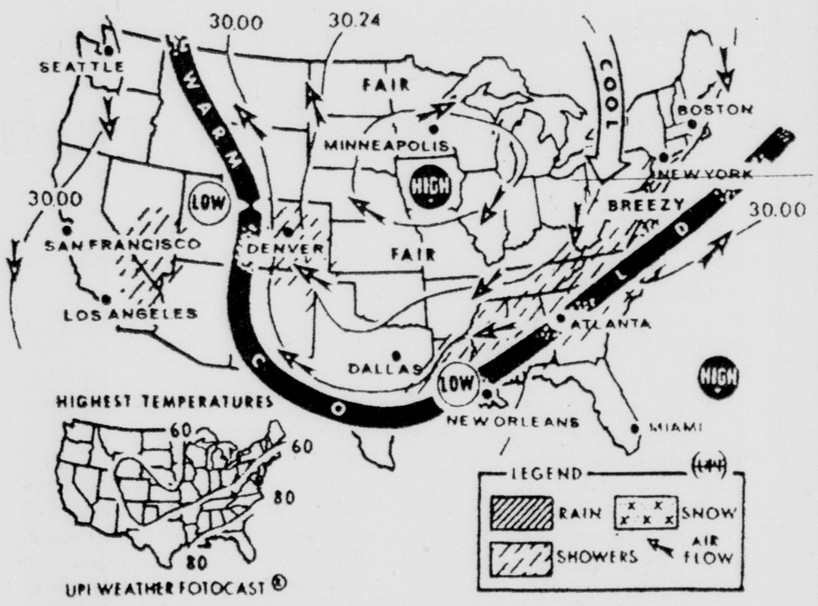

Theater contempt case before jury

A Cook County Circuit Court jury will hear a contempt of court case June 10 against the owners of the Rte. 53 Outdoor Theater, Palatine Township. Theater owners Jefferey and Stanford Kohlberg requested the jury trial Thursday. The Kohlbergs have been charged with refusing to follow a court order to stop showing sexually explicit films at the theater, at Rand and Hicks roads. An attorney for the Kohlbergs told Judge Francis Delaney Thursday that he feared his clients' case would be unnecessarily prejudiced because the contempt of court charges stemmed from Delaney's order and Delaney would be the judge to rule the case.

Buffalo Grove-Arlington bus OKd

After nearly four months of delays, the Regional Transportation Authority Thursday afternoon approved bus service between Buffalo Grove and the Arlington Heights downtown train station. An RTA spokesman said the service would start as soon as schedules are printed — possibly within a month. The commuter service will operate on a six-month trial basis. After six months, the RTA will fund up to 45 per cent of the operating costs not covered by fares.

Nursing home directory bill OKd by House panel

Legislation calling for the state to publish a directory evaluating nursing homes in Illinois is moving toward approval in the Illinois General Assembly.

The Illinois House Human Resources Committee has approved the legislation and while heavy opposition is expected in the House and Senate, State Rep. Eugenia Chapman, D-Arlington Heights, predicted the bill could be approved this year.

The legislation is part of a seven-bill package approved by the committee dealing with nursing homes.

Chapman said the Illinois Dept. of Public Health already publishes a directory of nursing homes in the state, but the list does not include any evaluation of the quality of the homes.

THE LEGISLATION indicates that if nursing home operators dispute information prepared by the state, the evaluation will not be included in the report. Chapman said if the rating were negative, operatos might dispute the information. She said the absence of an evaluation could be interpreted by the public as a negative rating of that home.

"This is the fastest growing industry in the state and we have found that about 11 per cent of the homes are in really sad shape," she said.

"This type of legislation will help clean up the nursing home industry," she added.

Chapman said that since the state already publishes a directory, there would be no additional cost to taxpayers.

One of the other bills in the nursing homes package calls for state audits of homes' operations. Chapman said audits would help the state in developing evaluations and keep closer watch on state spending for public aid subsidies for elderly persons confined to nursing homes.

Quake rocks Central Europe, 78 dead

ROME (UPI) — A severe earthquake centered in northeast Italy jolted much of Central and Western Europe Thursday night, killing at least 78 persons and injuring more than a thousand.

Officials said more than 100,000 residents in the hardest-hit area of Italy were without water supplies. Emergency supplies were rushed to the area.

The Interior Ministry in Rome said at least 78 persons died in the quake.

The General Command of the Carabinieri, Italy's national police, said more than 1,000 persons were injured. Unofficial reports said more than 450 victims were hospitalized and dozens of persons remained caught in rubble.

In the hardest-hit Friuli region adjoining the Austrian and Yugoslav borders, more than 100 persons had to be hospitalized.

The quake measured 6.5 on the open-ended Richter scale. Sweden's Uppsala Seismological Institute called it the strongest in Central Europe since 1963.

The deaths and damage appeared largely confined to Friuli.

Severely hit by the quake were the towns of Majano, Vitobono di Pinzano, Vagogna and Buia which form a fan-shape at the head of a valley funneling 14 miles south to Udine, the Friuli region's capital.

Emergency radio reports reaching Rome indicated more than 40 persons died in Majano, more than 10 in Vitobono and at least seven in Buia, a town of about 8,000 persons.

The reports said more than 25 per cent of the houses in Buia and another town, Osoppo, had collapsed and more than 20 persons were believed trapped in their rubble.

Structural damage to at least one hospital was so severe that the injured had to be treated by doctors in the streets outside, they said.

Officials said more than 100,000 residents of the stricken region were left without water and emergency supplies were being rushed by military transport from Rome and Foggia.

Authorities had to battle traffic chaos caused by thousands of survivors leaving their towns and villages to spend the night in the open. At least 15 army helicopters landed on soccer fields to take some of the most seriously hurt to major hospitals.

Normal communications with the region were knocked out but amateur radio operators pitched in to supplement police and military communications

The quake shook Italy all the way from the northern city of Milan to Naples in the south and sent thousands of Italians fleeing into the streets in panic.

It also rocked southern Germany, parts of Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia and Austria and was felt as far afield as Belgium.

The quake apparently caused no damage or injuries in Italy beyond the Friuli region.

A Milan resident watching television said, "I suddenly felt like I was on a fast-moving train."

Kissinger unveils plan to erase Third World poverty

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger Thursday presented a blueprint to erase poverty in the Third World and avert "economic warfare" between the world's rich and poor nations. The program could mean higher prices for U.S. consumers.

In a 10,000-word speech which drew warm applause from the 4,500 delegates to the U.N. Conference on Trade and Development, Kissinger called for creation of a $1 billion resources bank and establishment of a "Technology Corps" to train Third World workers.

At the end of the speech, Kissinger flew to Paris, ending his six-nation, 13-day African mission which he said opened a "new era" in U.S. African relations. U.S. experts termed Kissinger's program "an insurance policy" to stabilize the world's economy and said some U.S. goverment agencies had opposed parts of the program.

The experts said that if the blueprint was followed it could result in slightly higher prices for consumers in industrialized nations, including the United States, for some of the things they buy.

Kissinger said after presenting the program that debate over his proposals "could become quite acrimonious here." France and the Philippines criticized parts of Kissinger's program within hours.

Kissinger said the Soviet Union might not support the program, but would have "no means of blocking it" because Soviet financial support is not essential.

Kissinger also warned developing countries that confrontation with the West would not work.

"The United States, better than almost any other nation, could survive a period of economic warfare," he said.

"The developing countries (would) only hurt themselves . . . through contrived scarcities, cartels, embargoes or arbitrary seizures of property."

Kissinger said his program tells the Third World nations "they should get off the slogans and get to work on a concrete program."

The key proposal in Kissinger's blueprint was for the $1 billion international resources bank.

Its main purpose would be to encourage multinational corporations to invest in development of minerals and other resources in poor countries by offering them insurance against nationalization.

U.S. officials said the American contribution to the $1 billion needed to start the bank would be about $200 million.

Kissinger devoted much of his speech to proposals for getting more western technology into poor countries.

He called for programs in satellite technology, water resources development and ocean technology, creation of a privately-finance "technology Corps" to help train Third World manpower and special programs for technology training for people from poor countries in Western universities.

SECRETARY OF STATE Henry Kissinger, addressing U. N. Conference on Trade and Development in Nairobi, announces a far-reaching program to attack poverty in developing countries and urged them to seek prosperity in cooperation, rather than "economic warare," with the West.

Waiting period for Kerner's pardon waived

The Justice Department Thursday granted former Illinois Gov. Otto Kerner's request to waive a five-year waiting period because of his health so he will be eligible for a presidential pardon.

Kerner was given an emergency parole for health reasons in March 1975, after serving eight months of a three-year sentence for bribery, fraud and tax evasion. He normally would wait five years before consideration for a pardon.

Spokesman Dean St. Dennis said Deputy Attorney General Harold R. Tyler Jr. agreed to waive the five-year wait after reviewing a request Kerner's attorney submitted April 14 and a medical report from Kerner's physician.

"What this means is the pardon attorney's office will now begin consideration of Otto Kerner's petition for a pardon," St. Dennis said.

St. Dennis said there was no way of knowing how long the review by the Office of Pardon attorney Lawrence M. Traylor will take, but the review "will be a prompt and expeditious . . ."

The final pardon decision will be made by the White House.

Fire destroys 30 homes in Cleveland

A multiple-alarm fire blamed on arson destroyed an entire block of 30 frame houses and two small businesses on Cleveland's Southeast Side Thursday, leaving up to 100 people homeless. Three firemen were injured, none seriously, while battling the $600,000 fire and an unidentified man also sustained second-degree burns as a result of the area's worst fire in more than three decades.

Possible flu inoculation problem cited

Federal health experts were told Thursday a mass inoculation of 200 million Americans against swine influenze this fall may run into a roadblock by ill-informed private physicians who are more concerned about increasing epidemics of measles among high school students. Dr. Edwin D. Kilbourne, professor and chairman of the microbiology department, Mt. Sinai School of Medicine, New York, said, "Private physicians are grossly uninformed or misinformed about the vaccination program. The amount of misinformation is appalling. "If you want to get their cooperation, you must inform them," he told the Advisory Committee on Immunization Practices.

Strategist urges Ford to dump Kissinger

Senator Robert Griffin, R-Mich., said Thursday President Ford was urged at a White House campaign strategy meeting to dismiss Secretary of State Henry Kissinger in an effort to defuse criticism of administration foreign policy. Griffin said the suggestion designed to blunt Ronald Reagan's political attacks was made directly to Ford by one participant at a meeting of GOP congressional leaders but added that "it got no reaction." Griffin told a news conference he is urging Ford to actively seek the votes of Democratic supporters of Gov. George Wallace of Alabama in the upcoming May 18 Michigan GOP primary.

Panel OKs $413.3 billion target budget

A House-Senate conference committee Thursday approved a $413.3 billion target federal budget for 1977, $17.5 billion more than President Ford proposed. Congressional staff officials said that if the budget proposal is followed there will be a million more jobs at the end of 1977 than under Ford's proposed budget. They said the unemployment rate at the end of that year would be around 6 per cent, compared to 7 per cent under Ford's budget. Unemployment in March was 7.5 per cent. The administration says the extra spending will add to inflation and could cause a new recession.

Dead Marine's recruiter has no regrets

A former Marine said Thursday he had no regrets about recruiting a mentally retarded Texan who later died of head injuries at a training camp. "If a man ain't willing to die or kill, he doesn't have business there," said Harold D. Faulkner, 40, retired Marine master sergeant. The family of Lynn McClure of Lufkin, Tex., is suing the federal government for $3.5 million for the death of their son, who was killed by a group of fellow Marines using "pugil sticks" during a training session.

Soviets have arms advantage: Institute

The Soviet Union now has more weapons than the United States and the Kremlin's continuing arms buildup threatens detente, the Institute for Strategic Studies in London said Friday. The Institute's "Strategic Survey, 1975" said both the Soviet Union and the United State had suffered setbacks in the past year and were losing influence in the world. It said "recent events have increased the possibility of new conflicts and wars in the world," especially in southern Africa. The report said the Soviets enjoy a numerical advantage in most military fields, but the technological advantage of the United States and its European allies would deter a Soviet attack for the time being.

Loophole in Florida law

Known killers can't be punished

MIAMI (UPI) — The U.S. Supreme Court's 1972 decision striking down capital punishment opened a three-month loophole in Florida's law during which you could get away with murder, providing you were lucky enough to avoid the cops for two years.

"We've known about the hiatus for over a year," Assistant Atty. Gen. Ray Marky said Thursday, "But there's nothing we could to. It's unfortunate, but true."

Florida officials said they had no way of knowing how many people could be affected by the three-month void. Marky guesed, "It's probably a couple of hundred at the most."

There are at least 13 murder cases in the Miami area that fall within the three-month loophole and cannot be prosecuted — six under investigation by city police and seven by the Dade County Public Safety Department.

Marky said the U.S. Supreme Court's June 29, 1972, ruling that struck down capital punishment nullified Florida's capital felony law. The Florida legislature didn't get around to enacting a new capital felony law until Oct. 1, 1972.

"What that means," Marky said, "was that for three months Florida had no capital felony law, only a life felony law. The life felony law includes murder, but falls under the two-year statute of limitations law. Only capital felonies — first degree murder and rape — are excluded from the statute of limitations law," he explained.

"If Florida's law had excluded both capital and life felonies from the statute of limitations, there would have been no problem," Marky said, "but the law only excludes capital felonies.

"I'd like to see the Legislature revise the law to also exclude life felonies from the statute of limitations to possibly avoid this problem in the future," Marky said.

The assistant attorney general said the hiatus had no effect on persons tried and convicted for murder within two years of the legal void.

Dade County police were particularly upset by the loophole because they said it will prevent them from prosecuting several known killers, including a man who made a 31-page confession to the gangland execution of underworld figure Emmanuel Cammarata.

Cammarata, 69, was ambushed outside a Miami tavern Sept. 7, 1972, by a man detectives say is a "contract hit man" and was cut down in a hail of bullets from an M1 carbine.

Detectives said they solved the case last year when Jose Rodrigues, 59, was arrested by Essex County, N.J., authorities and gave them a detailed description of the slaying of Cammarata. Rodriguez even agreed to testify about the slaying without immunity before a grand jury.

Dade County Homicide Detective Julio Ojeda said: "It was a slap in the face to the guys who worked the case," when I had to tell them we couldn't make an arrest. It made us look pretty foolish.

FBI fueled black rivalries: report

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The FBI provoked bloody and sometimes fatal warfare among Black Panthers and rival groups in a secret drive to destroy the black power movement in the late 1960s, a Senate staff report said Thursday.

Rejecting FBI disclaimers of violent intent, the Senate Intelligence Committee staff report said J. Edgar Hoover's "counterintelligence program" deliberately inflamed existing rivalries that led to threats, beatings, bombings, shootings and at least four murders in California.

It also said the FBI set up the Panthers for the Chicago police raid in which Panther leaders Fred Hampton and Mark Clark were shot to death in 1969.

"Although the claimed purpose of the bureau's COINTEL-PRO tactics was to prevent violence, some of the FBI's tactics against the Black Panther Party were clearly intended to foster violence . . ." it said.

"This report does demonstrate . . . that the chief investigative branch of the federal government. which was charged by law with investigating crimes and preventing criminal conduct, itself engaged in lawless tactics and responded to deep-seated social problems by fomenting violence and unrest."

The report said Hoover regarded the Panthers as a Maoist Communist group and "the greatest threat to the internal security of the country."

The bureau's tactics, it said, included infiltrating the Panthers with informers and provocateurs, spreading defamatory charges against Panther leaders and circulating insulting cartoons and letters about one rival faction in the name of the other.

In one case, the report said, the Chicago FBI office tried to goad the Blackstone Rangers — a powerful street gang whose armaments included submachine guns — into attacking the local Panther group by sending the Ranger chief an anonymous letter saying the Panthers meant to kill him.

Agents seemed to take pride in their success at provoking fatal violence, according to some FBI memoranda quoted within the 46 page report on "The FBI's Covert Action Program to Destroy the Black Panther Party."

After the August, 1969 muder of Black Panther Sylvester Bell in San Diego, Calif., the San Diego FBI office reported that "shootings, beatings and a high degree of unrest continues to prevail in the ghetto area," and said:

"Although no specific (FBI) counterintelligence action can be credited with contributing to this overall situation, it is felt that a substantial amount of unrest is directly attributable to this program."

The report said the anti-Panther operation also included attempts to discredit celebrities such as actress Jan Fonda who "spoke in favor of Panther goals," by planting derogatory gossip column items about them.

Discussing the Chicago raid in which Hampton and Clark died in a gunbattle with police, the staff report said the FBI told the police where the Panther apartment was located, who used it, what the floor plan was and what weapons were inside.

O'Malley asks firms to aid RTA

by LYNN ASINOF

Leaders of the Chicago-area business community are being asked to help reorganize the strife-torn Regional Transportation Authority.

RTA board member Patrick L. O'Malley of Chicago Thursday said he is recruiting volunteers to "make a thorough study of the structure of the RTA."

"The people haven't been picked yet, but they will be," he said. O'Malley expects rcommendations on reorganization in 60 days.

LAST WEEK O'Malley announced that he wants the six-county transit agency to adopt a corporate structure, relieving Chairman Milton Pikarsky of his responsibility for daily RTA operations.

O'Malley Thursday quashed speculation that his proposal was designed as a compromise with four suburban board members who are demanding Pikarsky's ouster. The four have threatened to block passage of the 1976-77 budget unless Pikarsky resigns.

In response to a proposed ordinance that would have restricted Pikarsky's powers, O'Malley defended the chairman and called on the board to give Pikarsky more time.

"If Milton Pikarsky doesn't do over the next six months that which I think he is capable of doing, I will be the first to ask his resignation," O'Malley said.

O'MALLEY SAID the ordinance, introduced by D. Daniel Baldino of Evanston, was a "petty action designed to restrict the chairman."

The ordinance would have prohibited the chairman from granting any pay raises or hiring any employes until a pay plan and personnel system are adopted by the RTA. It would permanently prohibit the chairman from hiring anyone with a salary of more than $15,000 without board approval.

Baldino had the ordinance tabled Thursday, citing lack of votes, but he said it would definitely be reintroduced in a modified form.

Suburban board members said they will be interested to see what the businessmen's reorganization committee proposes. They said, however, they will not back any reorganization unless it includes Pikarsky's ouster. They claim Pikarsky is an inept administrator who has dealt unfairly with the suburbs.

"We plan to stick to our guns," said board member Richard Newland of Waukegan.

The RTA board discussed Pikarsky's tenure as chairman during a closed-door session Thursday morning. Baldino reported that "nothing was resolved."

Legal ruling asked on parking tax

The Regional Transportation Authority is looking cautiously into the possibiity of levying a parking tax to raise needed revenues.

The RTA board Thursday called for a legal opinion on various taxes that the six-county transportation agency can use to raise money. Board member D. Daniel Baldino of Evanston said he has serious questions about the legality of a parking tax.

Board members said they want the legal opinion before authorizing a $60,000 parking tax study to determine whether the tax would encourage commuters and shoppers to rely on public transportation.

At least one board member, James Kemp of Chicago, said he is opposed to the parking tax in any form because it will decrease the number of cars parking in loop garages. He said this in turn will put people out of work.

The legal opinion requested by the board also will consider the legality of a gasoline tax, which the RTA can levy under state law.

"There are some that question the right of the RTA to impose a gas tax," said board member Patrick L. O'Malley of Chicago, saying the matter should be put to rest.

Search on for 2 Cook County jail escapees

Three armed robbery suspects escaped from the Cook County jail Thursday by overpowering two jail employes working as elevator operators. One was recaptured.

Officials said the three inmates, one reportedly armed with a knife, escaped after beating two jail elevator operators. One of the two employes was treated at Cermak Memorial Hospital.

The three escapers, whom officials said were held on armed robbery charges, were identified as John Myles, 30; Winfred Payne, 30; and John Camp, 24.

Jail officials said Myles was recaptured. Search was on for the other two.

Rattlesnake bites woman

Mary Ann Schmidt, 28, who was bitten on the finger by a baby Argentine rattlesnake she was feeding, suffered no ill effects and was listed in good condition Thursday at Resurrection Hospital. But her neighbors were not so happy about the incident.

"We're concerned about a house that's got rattlesnakes in it," one neighbor said. "Isn't there a law against it?"

Police and animal authorities said it is illegal to keep a rattlesnake in the city of Chicago.

Miss Schmidt told authorities she was keeping two Argentine rattlesnakes overnight for a friend.

She said she was feeding mice embryos to the rattlers when one suddenly bit her on the finger.

At the hospital, Miss Schmidt was given penicillin and placed on intravenous feeding. Dr. Sherman Menton of Indiana University, an expert on snake venom, told doctors that the Argentine rattler's venom is among the deadliest in the world.

However, the bite was shallow, and no symptoms developed.

Court redistricting urged

A study commission in Chicago Thursday recommended restructuring the three federal judicial districts in Illinois and creating a fourth district that would include only the northeastern counties of Cook, DuPage, Kane and Lake.

Under the proposal, the Northern District of Illinois would be divided into two parts:

- The Chicago Metropolitan District, headquartered in Chicago and including Cook, Lake, Kane and DuPage counties.
- The Northern District, with the court sitting at Rockford, Joliet and Rock Island. It would include 20 counties.

8 buses a day by June 1?

Airport bus pact 'an inch away'

Arlington Heights and Continental Air Transport Co. are "just an inch away" from an agreement to re-establish daily bus service from the village to O'Hare Airport, said village officials.

The village filed a complaint with the Illinois Commerce Commission in 1975 to force Continental to either resume service to the airport or else lose its monopoly rights to the route. The transportation company halted service in 1974, citing as one reason the fuel shortage spawned by the Arab oil embargo that year.

Following the latest in a series of negotiating sessions between the village and Continental, Ernest Blomquist, assistant village attorney, said, "We are just an inch away from settling this amicably."

Blomquist said service of eight buses a day could be restored on a 120-day trial basis as soon as June 1.

IN RETURN FOR a resumption of the daily bus service, the village would agree to assist the transportation company with advertising the service through the village newsletter and limited "public relations" work for them, Blomquist said.

Village Pres. James T. Ryan, who signed the original complaint against Continental with the ICC, said, "We have been pressuring them. It has been a terrible loss to the residents of the area."

Ryan said the service under discussion would be from the Arlington Park commuter railroad station to the airport.

"We're talking about a park-and-ride service. People could park their car at the commuter lot and take the bus to the airport, or their spouses could drop them off for the bus ride," he said.

ANY SETTLEMENT of the complaint would have to be approved by the ICC, which regulates common carriers such as the bus lines.

The potential settlement is likely to involve establishment of a new abbreviated route for the buses. The old route began in Barrington and served towns along Northwest Highway to Des Plaines. The proposed route would eliminate service to Mount Prospect and Des Plaines.

Blomquist said the two towns had not voiced objections to being dropped from the route.

The exact route the daily bus would take is still to be worked out, Blomquist said, but would include Barrington, Palatine and Arlington Heights, based on projections of potential riders.

OTIS DOWNEN, ICC supervisor of rates and tariffs, refused to comment on the negotiations and the possible settlement.

"I cannot comment on matters while they are still before the commission," Downen said.

John McCarthy, Continental vice president, confirmed that settlement was near and said using the Arlington Park commuter station as terminal would present "a new concept in service" for its riders.

McCarthy said the railroad parking lot would open the service to more riders coming by car in addition to persons arriving by train.

Harper panel urges $1 tuition hike

A tuition hike at Harper College for the 1976-77 school year was recommended Thursday by the budget committee of the college board of trustees.

Tuition will increase from $14 to $15 per credit hour under the committee-approved plan. For a full-time student with an average course load of 15 credit hours per semester, total tuition costs will be about $30 more per year.

Trustees must formally approve the tuition hike at next Thursday's board meeting.

THE HIGHER TUITION rate will generate about $230,000 in the coming school year, said William Mann, vice president for administrative services.

This is the first tuition increase at Harper in three years. The budget plan also recommends another tuition increase of $1 per credit hour by 1978-79.

Tuition at Harper has gone up from $10 per credit hour in 1970-71. Mann said Harper is in the upper 10 to 20 per cent in tuition costs at community colleges in Illinois.

The budget plan adopted Thursday also calls for a tax increase of 5.5 cents per $100 assessed valuation in 1977-78.

TRUSTEE WILLIAM Kelly said he did not think the community would approve a tax increase in a referendum, especially since an increase was approved last fall to finance a second campus for Harper.

College Pres. Robert Lahti said if Harper needed the tax increase, he felt the community would approve it.

Harper receives approximately one-third of its funding from student tuition, one-third from local taxes and one-third from the state.

Uncertainty over the amount of state aid the college will receive, has resulted in more reliance on tuition and tax money for Harper operations.

WITHOUT INCREASES IN state aid or local taxes, Harper would face a $1 million budget deficit in 1980, Mann said.

With the tuition increase and a tax hike in two years, however, Mann said the college will have a balance of about $1.7 million in 1980.

Illinois community colleges this year have been hurt financially because of larger student enrollments without a corresponding increase in state aid.

Harper's enrollment this semester is up 19 per cent from last year. Another enrollment jump is expected next fall. The budget plan allots about $500,000 to handle extra enrollment.

Village to get development funds to be provided in existing, scattered sites in each of the next three years.

The board last month changed a figure in its application on the number of workers expected to reside in the village if subsidized housing were made available because HUD officials warned that it might cause the application to be rejected.

THE FIGURE was changed from 267 to 507, but is being appealed by the village.

The appeal, however, will have no impact on the approval of the village's application, said James Holzwart, an administrative assistant for the village.

All other figures submitted by the village were approved by HUD, he said.

Village Pres. James T. Ryan said the community development funds are "a step forward in the redevelopment of our downtown."

RYAN CALLED the funds "money that has come from the taxpayers of Arlington Heights that is now being rightfully returned."

The village will probably receive the funds in August, HUD officials told Holzwart.

The village must now do an environmental impact study on the proposed development of the parcels being acquired and also relocate a family living in one of the buildings there.

The cost of relocating the family will be paid with a portion of the $134,000, Holzwart said.

Tax referendum Saturday

$1 million riding on Dist. 25 vote

by KATHERINE BOYCE

More than $1 million will be at stake Saturday when voters in Arlington Heights Dist. 25 go to the polls to approve or reject an increase in taxes.

The district is asking for an increase in its education fund of 52 cents per $100 equalized assessed valuation. The increase would raise taxes on the average home in Arlington Heights by about $55 per year. the tax hike, which would appear on residents' tax bills next spring, would generate about $1.1 million in revenue for schools annually beginning with the 1977-78 academic year.

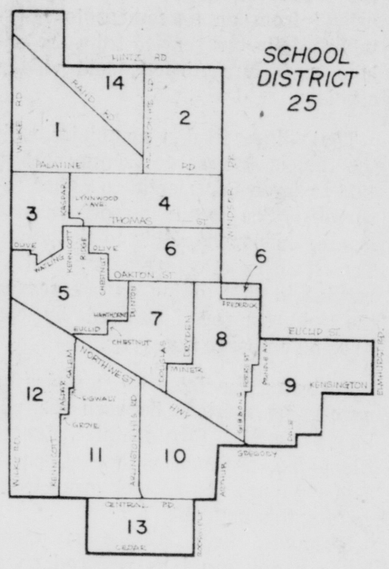

The money would be used to offset a budget deficit of about $1.6 million in the 1977-78 school year and an estimated $800,000 the following year. The deficit, caused by inflation, declining enrollment and cuts in state funding, is expected to continue through 1984.

THE BOARD OF education already has cut $900,000 in expenses for the coming school year, including the closing of North School and the elimination of 43 classroom teachers and 27 other district positions. The cut increased the average class size from 25 to 26.4 students. Cuts in assistant principal positions, pupil personnel services, social work, gifted programs, psychological services and learning aides also were made.

The district's last successful tax referendum was in 1968 when voters approved by a 2-to-1 margin a 21-cent increase in the education fund and a 12.5-cent increase in the building fund. More than 7,400 voters turned out at the polls, the fourth time the referendum was submitted to residents.

A 50-cent increase in taxes was rejected in 1971 when about 5,500 of the 9,270 voters opposed the referendum.

Polls will be open to registered voters from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. in 14 precincts Saturday. Residents who are not registered voters have until 5:30 p.m. today to register at the Arlington Heights Municipal Building, 33 S. Arlington Heights Rd.

Without a tax increase, supporters of Saturday's referendum believe Arlington Heights Dist. 25 is in danger of losing the high quality of education which it has worked so many years to achieve.

The drastic cuts in the school program, which may be necessary if the referendum is defeated, would cut at the heart of Arlington Hights schools, say supporters. The district has done all that it can to cut expenses without hurting the program, they say, but now it has no alternative but to go to the voters asking them for help. The district's financial problems are because of a complicated set of factors which are beyond its control.

Enrollment in the district is predicted to decline 31 per cent by 1984 causing a financial deficit in excess of $3 million because of the resulting loss in state aid. The decline comes without a proportionate reduction in costs because the enrollment drop is spread throughout the district making it difficult to quickly reduce the number of teachers, classrooms and school buildings.

Combined with that problem are cost increases because of inflation and decreases in revenue because of cut backs in state funding. Governor Daniel Walker's veto of education funding last summer cost the district $350,000 in state money.

THE LOCAL TAX base also puts the district in the poor category since the area has very little industry to boost assessed valuation. Of the 32 elementary school districts in North and Northwest suburban Cook County, Dist. 25 has the lowest assessed valuation per pupil and is third lowest in operating expenses per pupil.

Last fall the board of education put the dilemma to the public and asked residents to list their educational priorities. The two top priorities, maintaining quality education and maintaining neighborhood schools by keeping as many schools as possible within walking distance of students, received serious consideration when the board made its $900,000 in cuts for the coming year.

Those cuts, still left the district with a deficit and an increase in borrowing through the sale of tax anticipation warrants. The district has been borrowing on 27 per cent of next year's taxes but next year the borrowing level could go up to 50 per cent.

Passage of the referendum might freeze the level of borrowing and "postpone the necessity for major program cuts with the hope that in the future a change in state aid or inflation will emerge," said Board Pres. Joan Klussmann.

If the referendum is defeated the board would have to consider bringing back the referendum in the fall, said Mrs. Klussmann or cut deeper into the budget. The next set of cuts could include the elimination of band, music, physical education, gifted program, athletics, speech therapy, learning center staff, junior high home economics and industrial arts, further reduction in staff, increasing class size to more than 30 and the transfer of sixth graders to elementary schools.

OFFICIALS HAVE said that regardless of the outcome of the referendum, schools will be closed in the future as warranted by the continued decline in enrollment.

Passage of the referendum is important "to continue quality education in Arlington Heights," said Marty Kraybill, president of the Arlington Council of PTAs which has campaigned for the referendum. According to bylaws the PTA may not back a political candidate but is free to "support issues which affect the schools and the children," she said.

The PTA is explaining the district's financial problem to the public and the need for an increase in taxes. "I can't imagine why anybody would vote against it" unless they did not have the facts, she said.

"I don't want to see our programs cut any more than they are already," said Mrs. Kraybill. Programs such as music, athletics, home economics and industrial arts broaden a student's experiences and opportunities and make him "a well-rounded person," she said.

Mrs. Kraybill said she also feels "very strongly about class size." It is simple logic that "the more children that you have in a class the more problems you have," she said.

The district deserves the voters' support at the polls, said Mrs. Kraybill. The community has been "fortunate to have the administration and the school boards which have handled the district's finances so well."

Con...

"This additional tax is going to drive us older people out of town," said an Arlington Heights resident, voicing her opposition to Saturday's referendum to increase taxes in Arlington Heights Dist. 25.

The resident, who asked not to be identified, said she was speaking for herself and other senior citizens on fixed incomes who feel they cannot afford the increase on their tax bills. "We're very much opposed to it," she said. "It's going to take food off the table for us."

Opposition to the referendum appears to come more from individuals rather than organized groups. Residents have complained that tax increase will be a hardship for senior citizens on fixed incomes. They also argue that more cuts in district expenses should be made before taxes are increased.

"WE'RE NOT AGAINST education," the woman said, but the district should do more to cut expenses, rather than increase taxes. she said when her children went to school, they were not able to have all the programs that children have today. "If the older people had to do without things the younger ones can, too," she said. "They should roll with the said. "They should roll with the punches like we had to."

There has been a lack of communication from the school to senor citizens about the referendum, she said. Some senior citizens are not even aware a referendum is being held, she said.

Opposition to the referendum has come not only from older residents, but from younger residents and parents as well.

Betty Greene, parent from Park School, said she objects to the methods used by the district in campaigning for the referendum. School personnel have been using "scare tactics" by "telling the children that there will no longer be physical education if the referendum is defeated and they will no longer have music."

MS. GREENE said she also objects to the PTA's involvement in the referendum. The school district has "no business using the PTA for political purposes" by "pressing the parents to vote for it."

Supporters of the referendum have been "overzealous" in making phone calls and door-to-door surveys, pushing for 'yes' votes, she said. "I'm very opposed to the way it is being handled."

A tax increase is "not going to solve anything," said Ms. Greene. School officials have said passage of the increase would only forestall more cuts in district expenses in the future. "They're not making any final decisions, they're just putting it off," she said. "I'm not opposed to the $55 — that's small potatoes," she said, but even with passage of the referendum, the schools would be left "in limbo."

MS. GREENE would like to see more cuts in district expenses now, particularly by reducing the teaching staff and increasing class sizes. "I really feel we have to have larger classes," she said.

Another young parent, who deals in real estate part-time, agreed that the district is simply "putting off" cuts by pushing for a tax increase. "We are not owning up to the responsibility," she said.

"The community has reached a point where we can't afford it any more," said the parent, who asked not to be identified. "We're going to have to close schools or something." She said some of the school programs should be cut and "I'm not opposed to increasing the class size by one or two students."

THE PARENT feels teachers shouldn't ask for large increases in salary when the district has financial problems. "I don't feel sorry for them," she said, because they have tenure and summers off.

The parents also disagree with the argument of some school officials that good schools increase the market values of homes and that without the referendum the quality of education will be impaired. The cuts that may be necessary following defeat of the referendum will have no impact on the value of homes, she said, because people believe that suburban schools as a whole are above-average.

Opposition to the referendum has been silent and unorganized, said the parent. "I think a lot of people are just closing their mouths and just going to the polls."

Walker tax speedup plan slowly gaining support

Gov. Daniel Walker's plan to accelerate the collection of sales tax and state income tax withheld from employes is slowly, but somewhat grudgingly gaining support in the Illinois General Assembly.

The Illinois House Revenue Committee approved three bills by a 14-7 vote Thursday that would implement Walker's plan. The legislation must clear the full House and Senate before it can be enacted.

Walker met with legislative leaders last week to explain his proposals and a number of lawmakers came away from the session with the impression they had no real choice in the matter.

Even aides to Comptroller George Lindberg, a frequent critic of Walker's fiscal policies, offered a "qualified endorsement" of the proposal Thursday.

The Illinois Chamber of Commerce and the Illinois Retail Merchants Assn. oppose the plan and are expected to lobby strenuously for its defeat.

The measure approved by the House committee will require large employers and high-volume retailers to pay income tax withholdings and sales tax receipts faster than they do now.

Walker estimates the plan will give the state about $100 million in addition al revenue next year. Some observers believe the state will need the money in order to pay its bills next year.

Bargain hunters drive Dow higher in sluggish trading

NEW YORK (UPI) — Bargain hunters helped push prices higher Thursday in slow trading on the New York Stock Exchange as many investors discounted a surge in April's Wholesale Price Index.

The Dow Jones industrial average, a 7.24-point loser Wednesday, gained 3.07 points to 989.53, with the help of bargain hunting. The blue-chip average has floundered near the 1,000 level for weeks.

Standard & Poor's 500-stock index rose 0.28 to 101.16, the NYSE common stock index added 0.16 to 53.86 and the average price of an NYSE common share increased by 11 cents.

Advances topped declines, 746 to 627, among the 1,850 issues crossing the tape. The 477 unchanged issues reflected considerable investor uncertainty, analysts said.

VOLUME TOTALED 16,200,000 shares, up from the 14,970,000 traded Wednesday. The turnover was far below the first quarter pace of 27 million shares.

Many investors remained on the sidelines awaiting the Federal Reserve Board's weekly report released after the market closed that showed the nation's basic money supply declined by $800 million in the latest reporting week. Measured on a broader basis, however, the supply rose $900 million.

The report left Wall Street shaking its head in confusion. Earlier, published reports said money watchers had concluded the Fed had tightened credit a notch by allowing federal fund rates that banks charge one another on loans from uncommitted reserves to climb to 5 per cent from 4-7/8 per cent.

WHITE MOTORS, trading for the first time since last Friday, topped the Big Board actives, plung 3-3/8 points to 4-3/8 on 336,200 shares, including an opening block of 130,000 shares at 3¾.

Prices closed irregularly higher in moderate trading on the American Stock Exchange. The average price of an Amex share increased five cents. Declines edged advances, 298 to 247, among the 856 issues crossing the tape. Volume totaled 2,210,000 shares, compared with 1,800,000 traded Wednesday.

Bills are bills — I say let's explore the offer from Pepsodent !

The way we see it

We support FEC funding

After months of needless delay, Congress has finally approved the legislation necessary to put the Federal Election Commission back in business.

The approval of compromise legislation by the House and Senate should be the signal to the presidential candidates that they can expect to begin receiving fresh matching funds for their badly depleted campaign coffers.

But there are strong indications this may not be the case. President Gerald R. Ford indicated he may veto the new bill because the Democrats in Congress have made too many changes. Additional reaction has come from FEC Chairman Thomas Curtis. He has told Ford he wants no part of the "new" FEC if it has been weakened.

The possibility of a presidential veto and the need to appoint new commission members, who must be confirmed by the Senate, leaves open the possibility no money will be distributed until June.

Such a possibility only serves to heighten the mockery the Congress and the President have made of the campaign reforms approved last year. The new law meets the requirement of the U.S. Supreme Court, which struck down the old law.

Commission members now must be appointed by the President. However Congress did not stop at making that single change in the law. They also adopted provisions which give them the authority to veto rules and regulations adopted by the FEC. Such a provision was not needed and only added to the delay in getting the FEC back into operation.

We call on Ford and the Congress to quit politicking on the FEC. They have already combined to damage one of the few reforms approved by the Congress in the wake of the Watergate scandal.

It is too late in the primary season for major changes in the law which will result in additional delays. The time for major changes is after the elections, not now.

Some observers suggest Congressional leaders delayed action on the bill because they don't like the people who would be helped the most by a new infusion of government funds.

Washington outsiders Jimmy Carter and Ronald Reagan are running campaigns critical of the insiders who control the system. The men in Washington are beginning to look foolish because of their delays in getting the FEC going.

Presidential candidates should not have to go to court in an attempt to get the money they were promised when they began their campaigns. They should not have to cut their campaign efforts back because of a lack of funds. Candidates like U.S. Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., should not be forced to drop out because of problems at least partially related to a lack of funds.

Even though Jackson had other problems, the possibility that one candidate might be forced from the race makes Congress guilty of subverting the system it created.

Ford should sign the new bill, and if there is a need to hold hearings to confirm new FEC members, Congress should move as rapidly as possible to get the commission into operation.

Uniform method needed to estimate revenues

Much of the action in the state capitol now revolves around government spending in Illinois. Right now there is too much of it, and the members of the Illinois General Assembly are trying to make ends meet.

As in all budget balancing, the heart of the matter is just how much money the state will take in next fiscal year. Spending must be linked to revenue whether the budget being prepared is for a family of four or for Illinois, with its $9 billion in obligations.

Revenue projections can be volatile. A great part of the state's income varies from year to year. Revenue is tied to taxes raised through retail sales and other factors in the economy.

Currently the bureau of the budget, comptroller and economic and fiscal commission use different methodology and reporting periods to make their revenue projections.

We believe all state agencies should use a uniform method of estimating revenues and reporting their projections to lawmakers and the people.

The different reporting methods result in legislators comparing apples to oranges rather than apples to apples.

Standardizing revenue reporting practices will not end the state's financial problems, but it will allow legislators to have a clearer, more consistent picture of the state's revenue situation before they begin making the hard decisions on state spending.

Doubts about nuclear energy safety mounting

by MARK S. WEINBERG

There weren't many laughs on April Fool's Day this year at the Zion nuclear power plant north of Waukegan.

One core of that twin reactor was shut down for servicing that morning. A technician descended to the basement to close a valve on that core's water cooling system. Without realizing it he shut the wrong valve.

The reactor began to heat up because its cooling system was not functioning properly. Normally, a computer printout would inform engineers in the control room of the malfunction. But the printer had run out of typewriter ribbon and the computer failed to print the message.

The reactor continued to heat and a water pump burned out. The pump was replaced by a backup system, and it wasn't until a main bearing in the plant's turbine burned out that the reactor was shut down — cost of this mishap: $1.5 million.

INCIDENTS LIKE THIS one, although not approaching disaster conditions, have prompted doubts about the safety of nuclear power. At least 30 states have started some kind of legal action to regulate the booming nuclear power industry.

On June 8, California residents will vote on a nuclear safeguards initiative, called Proposition 15. It will be the first electoral test of a citizen-initiated proposal to control the nuclear industry.

Oregon and Colorado also will have similar propositions on their November ballots. At least 10 other states still have active movements to bring nuclear control measures to a vote, some possibly in November. Most observers are waiting, however, for the California results.

New Jersey is taking a different approach to control nuclear power plants. That state's Department of Environmental Protection recently announced it will study land-use controls for areas around nuclear power plants. The controls would limit population density for at least several miles around nuclear plants to prevent accidental exposure to radiation.

NEW JERSEY is the only state currently taking such action. The federal Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC) is withholding comment until the New Jersey study is complete.

In addition legislators in 30 states have filed, or are expected to file, nuclear control bills.

The California proposition, if enacted, would lift the nuclear industry's no-fault accident liability limit of $560 million. The limit is set by the Price-Anderson Act, a federal law recently renewed until 1987.

The proposition also would require two-thirds of the state legislature to be satisfied with the safety of operation and waste handling at all nuclear power reactors. If the legislators were not satisfied, operating reactors would have to reduce to 60 per cent of maximum power within one year and no new reactors would be licensed. After five years, if the vote were still unfavorable, the reactors would have to reduce power output by another 10 per cent each following year.

The measure's proponents, including national organizations like Friends of the Earth, Union of Concerned Scientists, and the Natural Resources Defense Fund, say the move will bring about safeguards and slow down expansion of nuclear facilities.

BUT NUCLEAR INDUSTRY and utility spokesmen, as well as editorials in such California newspapers as the Los Angeles Times and the San Francisco Examiner, claim the proposal would bring about the end of nuclear power in the state.

Critics of Proposition 15, joined by former Gov. Edmund G. "Pat" Brown, say it sets impossible safety standards. They cite provisions which require protection against release of radioactive material due to earthquakes or other acts of God, sabotage, government upheavals or imperfect technologies, saying such safeguards would cost billions of dollars.

Supporters of the initiative claim the industry is mounting a massive media campaign directed at defeating the measure. They say industry plans to spend up to $7 million on television, radio, print and direct mail advertising to generate pro-nuclear sentiment.

INDUSTRY SPOKESMEN deny such plans. They say that the industry probably will spend about $1.5 million there, or about the same as planned by the anti-nuclear forces.

Besides the proposition in California, three of four nuclear control laws already have been sent to the state's senate. The fourth bill, concerning the lifting of the liability limits, died in committee without a seconding motion.

The other California bills concern radioactive waste reprocessing, safety tests and a study of putting nuclear plants underground.

The nuclear industry, as well as energy vendors, claim California will need reactor power in the near future. Only 2 per cent of the state's power now comes from nuclear sources, but the industry projects 27 per cent of the state's electricity will come from nuclear sources by the year 2000.

THE RECENT cancellation of $3.5 billion Kaiparowits coal power plant project in southern Utah, intended to supply electricity to Southern California, will undoubtedly increase the need for nuclear expansion, say industry spokesmen.

An Energy Research and Development Administration (ERDA) study in San Francisco concluded that a nuclear moratorium would cost California $40 billion over the next 20 years.

Without nuclear power, the oil consumption of California's electric utilities will rise from its present 75 million barrels per year to an alarming 4000 million barrels by 1995, says the ERDA study.

In support of continued expansion of nuclear technology, the industry cites its safety record to date, and the environmental impact of expanding other energy technologies such as burning additional oil and coal.

The resignations of three General Electric nuclear safety engineers and a NRC project manager, all of whom quit because of an alleged lack of adequate safety precautions, recently drew nationwide attention to the issue.

NUCLEAR POWER critics cite the problems of disposal of long-lived radioactive wastes, the danger of theft of nuclear material, the potential for sabotage and possible consequences of a disastrous accident.

Even if the California initiative is passed, the antinuclear forces face yet another legal battle. Industry and NRC officials maintain that federal law reserves the regulation of nuclear activities for federal agencies.

Residents can be 'better informed'

Dana Peckworth in the Fence Post of April 29 gives two references with which readers can become "better informed" on nuclear power. These references give one side of what is more an emotional than a technical controversy.

Readers wishing to acquaint themselves with the other point of view might read: Wilson, R., "Some perspectives on the energy question," Nuclear News, page 55, Feb. '76, and Wilson, R., "The costs of safety," New Scientist, page 274, Oct. 30, 1975.

Clarify death camp

Having lost several members of our families in Auschwitz, and having seen the emotional and physical scars on survivors, we must protest and request correction of Karen Blecha's reference to Auschwitz as "the Polish death camp" (The HERALD, Saturday, April 24th). This wording may be misconstrued to lay the blame for the Nazi atrocity on the Polish people, who themselves were the majority of the 4 million put to death there.

(Editor's note: Auschwitz was a Nazi death camp located in Poland; the reference in Blecha's article was to its location, not its operators.

Complexities cloud issue of state funding for schools

by STEVE BROWN

A news analysis

Illinois lawmakers began pushing in earnest this week to get a number of school aid-related bills through the Illinois General Assembly.

Although a number of bills involve state financial assistance to schools or changes in the complicated formula used by the state to determine how much state aid a school district will receive, observers believe the taxpaying public is at a loss to understand the situation.

At the forefront of the battle of the legislative action are two supplemental appropriations bills for schools for the current fiscal year, which ends on June 30.

The Illinois House already has approved a $39 million supplemental appropriation bill for special education programs. The legislation also must be approved by the Illinois Senate and signed by Gov. Daniel Walker before the funds can be given to the school. Walker already has hinted he will veto the spending measure because the state does not have the money. Walker vetoed similiar legislation last year, triggering a major battle in the General Assembly.

THE HOUSE Appropriations II Committee has voted to approve a $67.5 million supplemental appropriations bill. This bill now must be passed by the full House and Senate and signed by Walker. Walker is expected to veto the measure as he did the special education bill and possibly cause another veto override fight in June.

The governor already has received $3.65 million for state scholarships. The money was needed because of the large number of Illinois college students who had sought state aid this year. Walker has indicated he will approve this measure.

To complicate understanding of the legislative active on the money bills, the lawmakers also are looking at changes in the school aid formula, which would help local districts overcome the money problems they face because of the cutback in state aid.

ONE BILL CALLS for elimination of the tax rate rollback provisions in the school aid formula. When the state decided to make itself the major source of revenue for school districts, lawmakers approved a provision that requires school districts to reduce their real estate tax rates as the amount of state aid increases.

While that bill has cleared an Illinois House committee and awaits approval from the full House, Senate and the governor, another tax rate matter is bottled up in committee.

The delayed legislation would allow local school districts to raise their real estate tax rates above the maximum level not set by the state aid formula.

This legislation is another attempt to allow local districts to make up for reductions in the amount of money available from the state.

THERE IS A seemingly countless number of bills that offered a variety of different appropriations for school districts to ensure the districts do not receive less state aid than was distributed in the last fiscal year.

Some observers note that understanding the current legislative action is further complicated by the fact the General Assembly currently is working on appropriations for fiscal 1977, which begins July 1.

The fate of all these money bills rests with the decision by the lawmakers whether the state has the money to fund the supplemental appropriations. There is a sharp division on the question and some lawmakers now are arguing that the state must provide the money because local districts counted on the funds when they prepared their spending plans.

Congressional wrapup

Mikva, Crane divided on defense budget trim

From the Roll Call Report

Here is how members of Illinois' delegation in the U.S. House and two members of the U.S. Senate voted on major issues during the last week of April.

U.S. House

DEFENSE SPENDING: The House rejected, 255-145, an amendment to reduce defense spending $2 billion to $110 billion for fiscal 1977. Supporters cited recent polls which showed the public thinks the government spends too much for defense. Opponents rejected that notion.

YES: Mikva, Metcalfe, Collins, Yates and Simon.

NO: Crane, Murphy, Russo, Derwinski, Fary, Hyde, Rostenkowski, Annunzio, Crane, McClory, Erlenborn, Hall, Anderson, O'Brien, Michel, Railsback, Findley, Madigan, Shipley and Price.

VETERANS BENEFITS: The House adopted, 218-188, an amendment to the fiscal 1977 budget to increase spending for veteran's benefits $1.8 billion to $20 billion.

The bulk of the increase would fund cost-of-living increases, while $600 million will be used to extend the deadline for veterans to use educational benefits.

Supports said the veterans needed the increase to keep up with inflation. Opponents complained about another extension of the deadline for educational benefits which cost $600 million.

YES: Mikva, Metcalfe, Russo, Collins, Hall, O'Brien, Railsback, Madigan, Price and Simon.

NO: Crane, Murphy, Derwinski, Fary, Hyde, Rostenkowski, Yates, Annunzio, McClory, Erlenborn, Anderson, Michel, Findley and Shipley.

U.S. Senate

GRAIN INSPECTION: The Senate rejected, 38-36, an amendment to eliminate a requirement that federal inspectors take over inspection of foreign-bound grain at major inland terminals.

The defeat left intact a provision for a federal inspection system to replace private and state inspectors at all major U.S. ports.

U.S. Sen. Charles Percy for the amendment, while U.S. Sen. Adlai Stevenson voted against the measure.

HOUSING: The Senate passed, 55-24, a bill extending major housing programs beyond fiscal 1977. The bill anticipates the government spending $421 million during the next fiscal year and $27.1 billion over the next 10 to 20 years.

The bill extends a broad range of programs for housing for the elderly, poor and middle class. While the legislation does not propose any new programs, it does attempt to change the basic federal approach to housing for the poor.

The new approach would have the federal government revert to constructing its own facilities or work with local government housing authorities. The government has not used this approach since 1973 when it adopted a program which encouraged private developers to build low income housing with government assistance.

Stevenson voted for the measure while Percy opposed it.

String art

May be hobby or craft but comes off as art

by ELEANOR RIVES

John and Karen Austin have a good string-thing going.

Karen is adept at original designs, but doesn't like working with wire and fine nails. John thinks wire is a great challenge and sometimes spaces his nails so close together he must use a jeweler's screwdriver to separate them. Both are comfortable with string, thread and yarn.

What this Wheeling couple produce with their graphing, hammering and stringing are some quite extraordinary wall hangings. They call it string art, in no way to be confused with the craft kits of similar name. The work of the Austins is intricate, three-dimensional, subtly shaded and, except for a few lone pattern adaptations, completely original.

"WITH US IT'S A HOBBY," said John. "Some people classify it as a craft. Actually it's a geometric stringing from one point to another. But it's art too, especially the wire work. There's as much art in this as in wire sculpture."

Wire is not easy to work with. It must be strung only by hand — not crimped by pliers — and John's hands, which refuse to callous, show the wear and tear of a wire project. Wire takes it toll in skinned fingers.

A financial analyst by profession, John was an avid sailor before moving to Wheeling in 1970. He began doing string pictures of sailboats two years ago and "sailed" through about 20 of them, all different. Currently he is gone on clocks, especially pendulum clocks — "the movement attracts attention."

John and Karen were as excited as little kids the night they worked on their first clock. Now he has completed seven of them. John buys the clock mechanisms separately — they are not easy to find. They must have a long enough stem to go through a half-inch block of wood.

He uses pressboard (sometimes called particle board) for all his string art because it holds nail tension well. The board is tautly covered with double-knit fabric, or sometimes suede, burlap or velveteen.

"FIFTY PER CENT of the preparation is in the nail pounding," he said. "I use special fine brass-coated nails and keep them close together."

The Austins aren't the only ones who get excited about John's clocks. When they are part of an exhibit, they seldom stay in place longer than a week or two. The first one sold immediately, right off the wall.

The other pieces are popular, too, many of them special orders: a lion to add to a woman's collection; representations of tennis, golf, bowling, for sports enthusiasts; small 5 by 7-inch Christmas plaques; a train; a seascape; hot air balloons. Purchasers often request colors to match their decor.

The most unusual request was for a scale representation of a metal-turning lathe. It was strung in silver silk thread.

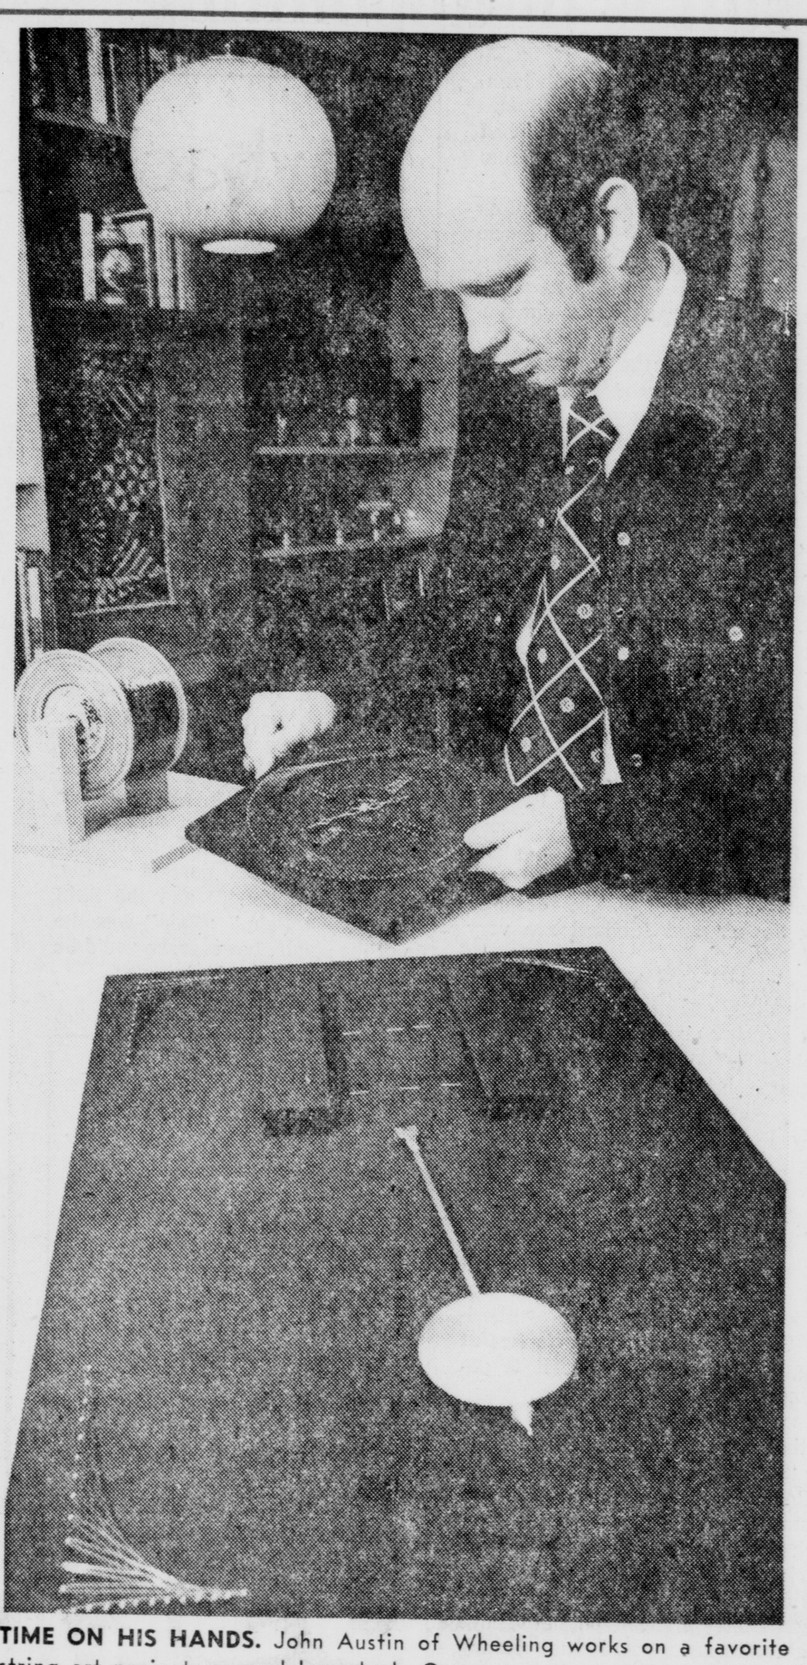

"We started making these things as a hobby," said John, "But people kept asking to buy them." The Austins' wall hangings sell for $6 to $65, depending upon size, intricacy and time involved.

JOHN AND KAREN, both members of the Mount Prospect Art League, have exhibited their works in local banks, theaters, beauty parlors, barbershops, realty and doctor offices. Currently their string art may be seen at Northwest Federal Savings at Milwaukee, Irving and Cicero, Chicago. In June, sample pieces will be displayed at the Hartwell Corp., 325 W. Prospect Ave., Mount Prospect. For July, their work will be exhibited at Northwest Community Hospital, Arlington Heights.

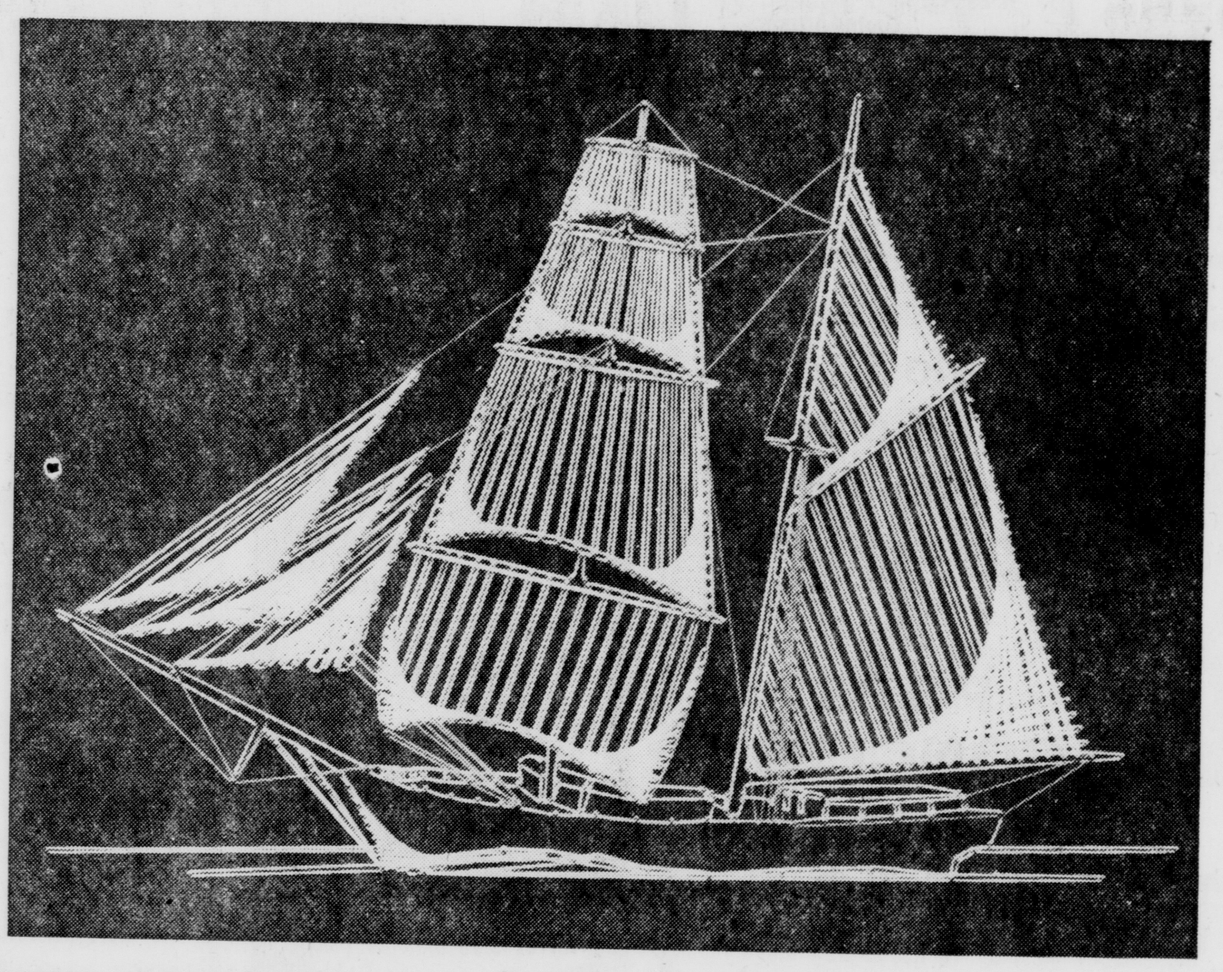

If John should ever get ticked with clockmaking, what would he do next? "Whatever people are looking for, what they appreciate," he replied. "But it would be in the same medium. String art is my only artistic endeavor."

Perhaps one day he will start sailing again. "I have a new crew coming up," he said as he winked at his 2-year-old daughter, Traci.

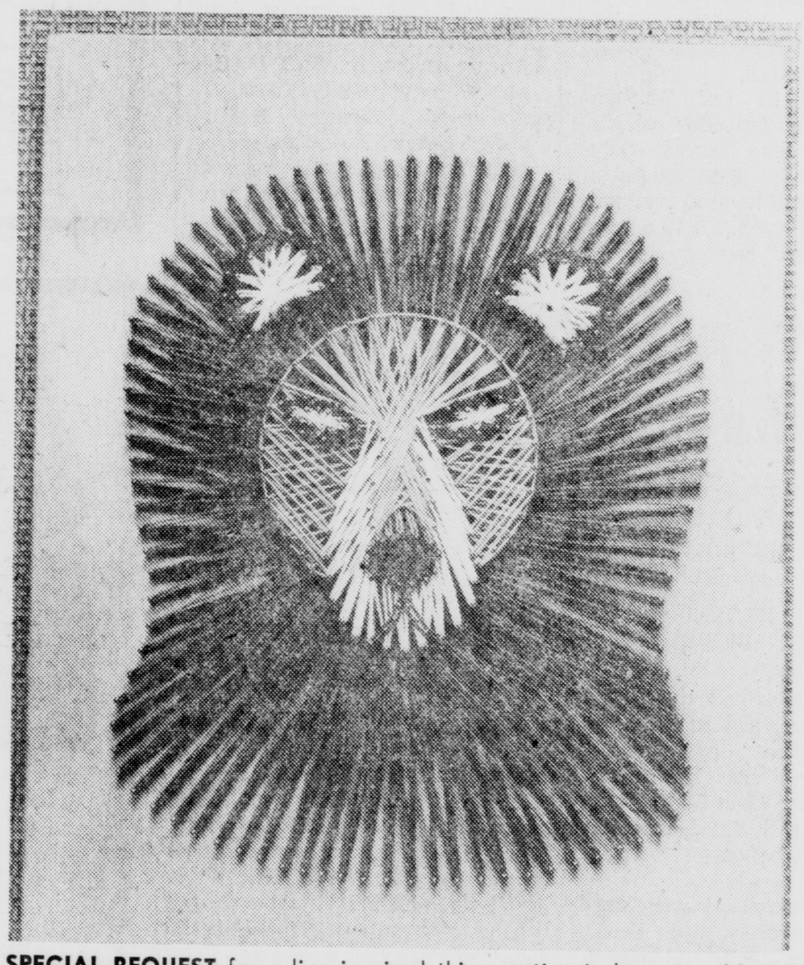

(Further information about the Austins' string art is available through 640-6700, ext. 3.)

TIME ON HIS HANDS. John Austin of Wheeling works on a favorite string art project, a pendulum clock. Orange copper wire is strung on fine, brasscoated nails, all set against a background of brown double-knit fabric over pressboard.

TWENTY STRING-ART ships reflect John's interest in sailing. One of the most intricate is "The Schooner," above. In gold and orange string with water in blue, it is worked on small, closely spaced nails. It took John about 18 hours to complete the 20 by 24-inch piece.

SPECIAL REQUEST for a lion inspired this creation in brown, gold and white yarns by Karen Austin. The face is raised above the triple-layered mane for a three-dimensional effect.

Bergman's exile a self-imposed social one

by VERNON SCOTT

"Now I am almost a gypsy. I don't know the status of my tax situation in Sweden. I know nothing of figures and taxes. So I left those silly things to think about creative things."

Ingmar Bergman was rehearsing his new film, "The Serpent's Egg," at his Stockholm studios last January when police arrested him on orders from the tax people.

"This was a hateful thing," he said. "The charges against me were dropped. Then they began investigation from another angle. They tried to blackmail me.

"THE PAST THREE months I was involved in a Kafka situation. I love my country. My roots are there. I don't feel bitter about the government. I just had to go away to be creative and free again.

"My lawyers said the tax matter might be settled in two, three or five years. I have no brains or nerves for those fights. So now I am living from day to day, improvising.

"I don't know where I will live. But I would like it to be near the sea where I can stroll on the beach in Britain, Malibu or Greenland.

"I start 'The Serpent's Egg' in Germany in October. I go from here to Paris, Munich, Berlin and Vienna. That's strange for a man who hates to travel."

Bergman is traveling light. He left everything he owns behind him in Sweden. His personal papers and films are being supervised by able employes.

Bergman knows only that his homes, studio and other holdings in Sweden are worth far more than whatever the tax department claims he owes. He seems willing to let it all go, if that's what the government decides, rather than return and fight.

"I DON'T MIND about money and things," he said. "But I miss the people I work with. My crew is now making a picture for my production manager who will bring me the dailies (rushes).

"I realize my exile is a personal and social statement about my country. But I don't want this to be a political statement. When they came and took me away from my rehearsal, I suffered the first depression of my life, an emptiness.

"In the past my depressions were creative, but this was different. I felt I was going to lose my identity. It was terrifying.

"I can't blame my country, just clumsy amateurs in the administration. The prime minister is a friend of mine, but I would not think of calling on our friendship in this matter.

"TODAY I FEEL happy to be away and to think about creative things. Maybe I should be grateful to the tax department. I can have an imagination again after three months of emptiness."

In the past Bergman's movies, while dealing with universal subjects, have, perhaps, suffered from his insular surroundings and the limitations of Sweden itself.

Now that he is branching out and opening up, Ingmar Bergman's films may soar beyond anything he has done in the past. One is under the impression the distinguished director is keenly aware of this possibility.

INGMAR BERGMAN

Stones' beat slows down, result is disappointing

Playback
by Tom Von Malder

The new Rolling Stones album, "Black and Blue" (Rolling Stones records), contains both good and bad songs and is the slowest Stones album I can remember.

The title refers to the band's often acknowledged debt to black music and, sure enough, we're offered a taste of several boack styles, including blues, reggae, disco and Motown.

Curiously, all of the songs were recorded from December 1974 to April 1975, making them a year or more older at release. One wonders if the Stones did not care much for these songs.

In a track by track analysis, one finds: "Hot Stuff" is a repetitious and ultimately dull disco song, which owes far too much to David Bowie's recent work. The lyrics aren't much either. "Cherry Oh Baby" (the only non-group written song) is very slow reggae, again repetitious and even duller.

"HAND OF FATE" is the album's best song, having real drive. Guest Wayne Perkins contributes an excellent lead guitar and Keith Richard is fine on backing guitar. "Memory Motel" is the second best song and the longest. It is a semi-bluesy romance, medium tempo. The vocals by Mick Jagger and Richard are very good.

The second side has nothing very outstanding, except for Jagger's and Billy Preston's singing on the bluesy "Melody." The song lacks any music punch, however, and Preston's piano playing is just ordinary. Similarly, Preston is pedestrian on "Hey, Negrita" which as a whole, except for Ron Wood's guitar, seems to plod along.

"Fool To Cry" is the album's single. It was the earliest recorded song, a ballad given Motownish production and using a string synthesizer. The album ends with its fastest song, "Crazy Mama," but it is undistinguished.

Other new releases include:

• "Here and There" by Elton John (MCA). The London side of this live album is much better than the New York side, on which the songs lack the punch of the original versions. The best from London is a duet with songwriter Lesley Duncan on her "Love Song" and rousing versions of "Honky Cat" and "Crocodile Rock."

Both concerts were in 1974, and among the other songs are "Rocket Man," "Bennie and the Jets" and "Funeral For a Friend/Love Lies Bleeding." Elton John's next studio album is due in the fall.

• "Presence" by Led Zeppelin (Swan Song). The Zep offer nothing much new this time around. Only "Nobody's Fault But Mine" sticks in the mind because of its good beat and numerous short breaks. For the rest, "Candy Store Rock" has a good vocal track and "Tea For One" is a slower change-of-pace.

• "Status Quo" (Capitol). England's premier boogie band shows it can still do well-done, heavy metal crunch after 14 years together. What makes the performers good is that in addition to their pile-driving sound, they can sing. "Is There a Better Way" ranks among their best ever, and "Ring of a Change" has an interesting echo-vocal effect.

• "Destroyer" by Kiss (Casablanca). This is the first Kiss album I have disliked, and I blame it all on producer Bob Ezrin (Alice Cooper). The only menace left in the group is in the lyrics, while the music has become more of a circus, what with angelic choruses, strings and truck sounds. Side two is a little better and contains the Kiss' current single, "Shout It Out Loud," and the S&M song, "Sweet Pain." "Pain" was the flip of the single, however, so you'd be better off just buying the single.

Soundings:

A half-hour television show has been made by MICKEY DOLENZ and DAVY JONES, former Monkees, and TOMMY BOYCE and BOBBY HART, former Monkees' writers and producers. Last summer the four launched a successful concert tour and have just completed an album, "Dolenz, Jones, Boyce & Hart."

Other upcoming albums include "Natalie" by double Grammy winner NATALIE COLE, "Fly Like An Angel" by STEVE "THE JOKER" MILLER, "RASPBERRIES' BEST," and "BILL COSBY Is Not Himself These Days, Rat Own." The Cosby album is a hilarious takeoff on contemporary soul singers, including Barry White and James Brown.

In the area: FOGHAT and UFO, Thursday through May 15, Aragon Ballroom; BOB MARLEY & the WAILERS, Tuesday, Auditorium Theatre; EARL SLICK (former Bowie guitarist) and STATUS QUO (see review above, Saturday, Randhurst Ice Arena.

Career, private life viewed in books on Sen. Kennedy

The book stall

"EDWARD KENNEDY AND THE CAMELOT LEGACY,"
by JAMES McGREGOR BURNS.
(Norton, $11.95)

"THE LAST KENNEDY,"
by ROBERT SHERRILL.
(Dial Press, $8.95)

James McGregor Burns clearly still dotes on Camelot, and at times his attitude unbalances this otherwise scholarly study of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's career. When Burns writes about the Kennedy Presidency, his prose glistens and drips with imagery — and nostalgia.

Still, he has written a thorough and careful presentation of Sen. Kennedy's strengths and weaknesses, though one might argue that he does not devote enough space to Chappaquiddick, the single most devastating incident in Kennedy's political life.

Politics was the meat and potatoes of the Kennedy household, as Burns presents the senator's youth. Ted Kennedy was 16 when his brother John was elected to Congress, and the youngest Kennedy's course was foreordained.

WHATEVER GIFTS Ted Kennedy brought to politics, the one undeniable one is his ability to attract votes. In his first Senate try, he collected 69 per cent of the vote against an experienced, well-liked opponent.

Burns notes that Kennedy has become an increasingly effective senator, sobered immensely by the deaths of his brothers and by Chappaquiddick. Burns believes that it was Robert Kennedy in the 1964-1968 period who had the more profound influence on Ted Kennedy.

After Chappaquiddick he was asked why he did not quit politics and replied, "What would I do? . . . it seems to me, if you have the ability and the training for public service, the opportunity, it would be a sin not to pursue it."

Burns goes into Kennedy's "playfulness" and says, "After hours he likes a strong drink, good companions, plenty of laughter, a polka and a pretty girl." Burns points to the obvious dangers of this "reckless, capricious private life" and suggests that the style of play is part of a family tradition of "playing hard as a relief from working hard."

IF BURNS RUSHES past Chappaquiddick at unseeming speed, Sherrill, Washington correspondent for The Nation, writes about it exhaustively, calling it the "most brilliant cover-up ever achieved in the U.S.," not excepting Watergate.

The entire state of Massachusetts is enthralled with the Kennedy millions, according to Sherrill, who looses a few broadsides at Joseph Jr., Jack and Bobby, but concentrates half the book on Chappaquiddick.

The story of the death of Mary Jo Kopechne is full of stupidities and obsequiousness, but 227 pages is far too long for a political editorial and too short for an $8.95 book.

"THE 103RD BALLOT,"
BY ROBERT K. MURRAY
(Harper and Row, $10.95)

The last time the Democrats met to nominate a presidential candidate at a national convention in New York, the year was 1924 and the convention was a disaster. The weather was torrid, the delegates argumentative and confused, and one of the worst candidates — John W. Davis — was nominated on the 103rd ballot, ending the longest convention in history.

THE DEMOCRATS had demonstrated some of the shabbiest politics ever seen, replete with bigotry and ignorance. Of course, the key work was "seen" — usually politicians don't hire Madison Square Garden to display such goings-on. The party took years to recover. The author, a professor of history, has done a competent, thorough job of retelling the story of one of the nation's worst political fiascos.

Making films again

Liv's back with Bergman

by VERNON SCOTT

Liv Ullmann was run through the Hollywood glamor mill four years ago but happily returned to her Norwegian roots, unwilling or unable to play the role of a sex goddess.

Ullmann came to Hollywood as one of Europe's great stars, a veteran of a half dozen films with Ingmar Bergman, the critics' darling.

The blonde Scandinavian was miscast in the calamitous musical version of "Lost Horizon" and "Forty Carats" which bombed completely. Another American-made film, "Zandy's Bride" with Gene Hackman, was a disaster.

Now Liv is back where she belongs — with Bergman.

Together they made such hits as "Cries and Whispers," "Hour of the Wolf," and "Scenes from a Marriage." Liv has done seven pictures for Bergman, winning awards for almost all her performances in them.

If Bergman and Ullmann work on a felicitous basis, it is understandable. They were lovers for years. Liv bore the director a daughter, Linn, 9.

ALTHOUGH romance has dwindled, the spark of creativity continues to flourish between the two. They recently completed "Face to Face," another ponderous drama which is certain to win Liv an Oscar nomination.

In Hollywood to create interest in the Paramount release, Liv was glowing with good health, beauty and excitement.

"This is the most personal film I've made with Ingmar," she said, "because it is his fears and anxieties that the woman on the screen — Jenny — must live with.

"He understands women better than any director and uses us instead of men to say what he feels. He thinks actresses are braver and don't try to hide as much as male performers.

"Ingmar uses me very freely to express himself because we have known each other so well for 11 years. He is able to pull more from me than any other director. The reason is that he writes the scripts and gives me wonderful material."

DESPITE LIV'S personal and professional independence, she admits there still exists a Pygmalion-Galatea relationship between herself and Bergman.

"There always will be that feeling between us," she said. "It proves to me that two people can grow together and be good on their own as well. We are able to use each other to do our best as creative people.

"I perform best for Ingmar not only because he gives me wonderful material but because I trust him and feel comfortable working for him."

Liv regrets only that she hasn't done a comedy with Bergman. All seven of their films together have been downbeat if not outright morbid.

She says she will work for the director again this fall in a picture tentatively titled "The Snake's Egg," another heavy drama.

"But I doubt if it will be made in Sweden because Ingmar is upset with the government," she said.

Liv Ullman is more than a beautiful and extraordinarily gifted actress. She is a strong-minded woman deeply committed to the feminist movement. She has written a book titled "The Change."

"IT IS NOT AN autobiography," Liv said. "It is about the changes in a woman's life as she develops from childhood to middle age.

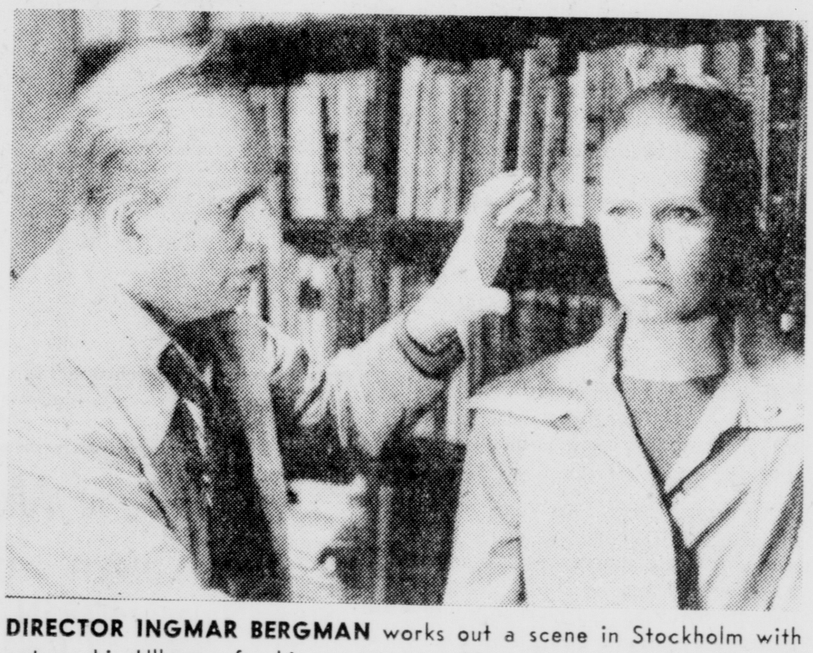

"The book is fragments of growing up from personal thoughts. It took me four years to write and I enjoyed it more than acting. I wanted to communicate my private thoughts and not exhibit my public figure."

Liv continues to make her home in her native Norway with an apartment in Oslo and a vacation retreat on a fiord overlooking the North Sea.

She is content to continue working in the New Theater of Oslo for a modest salary and to make an occasional movie. Liv has lost the desire to become an international superstar if, indeed, she ever sought that goal.

"I'd like to do another Hollywood picture with the right script and director," she concluded. "I had a good time here and was treated beautifully. But I'm not dying to work anymore. When I perform now I want it to be important to me."

(United Press International)

'Face' emits powerful emotions

by DAVID DUGAS
(A review)

Ingmar Bergman always demands that audiences tune in on his very special wavelength. His most recent films, "Cries and Whispers" and "Scenes From A Marriage," traveled a cerebral UHF channel, making them extraordinarily powerful to some viewers while producing only emotional static in others.

"Face to Face," Bergman's latest film, carries his introspection to new lengths. It is bound to thrill his most patient and receptive admirers. Less tolerant souls risk catatonia.

"Face to Face" reunites Liv Ullmann and Erland Josephson of "Scenes From A Marriage" but in very different circumstances. She is a psychiatrist slipping into her own breakdown. He is an understanding physician (and homosexual, it turns out, but that's secondary).

Hysterics and hallucinations figure prominently in Ullmann's emotional collapse and she performs them with consummate skill, even with lines rendered from the Swedish by English subtitles such as "Why do I always have to have a guilty conscience?"

BUT GUILT IS contagious. After nearly 2½ hours of "Face to Face" I felt guilty for wondering how Joan Crawford might have played the role. When Ullmann hallucinates seeing herself in a coffin, nails it shut while the body pounds at the lid from inside, and then turns it into an inferno, I wondered if Ken Russell had taken over. (Maybe the lid would burst open, revealing Cosima Wagner in a Nazi outfit.) I felt guilty wishing I were watching Ullmann in the amiable atmosphere of "40 Carats."

"Face to Face," unlike "Scenes From A Marriage," is not re-edited from TV although Bergman did a separate expanded version for Swedish television. The Sven Nykvist photography is customarily crisp.

"Face to Face" is being distributed by Paramount and is rated (R).

A taste of Mexican dining

Bill o' fare

How can you review a Mexican restaurant when you have only eaten authentic Mexican cuisine about three times in your life (if you count the taco stand in California 16 years ago) and you don't know a taquito from a mosquito?

You take along a native Mexican friend, that's how. If Yolanda says it is good, you better believe it. So, with our experienced companion in tow, we ventured into El Sombrero, Mount Prospect.

My husband and I proceeded very cautiously. We had been burned — literally — only the previous week at a different south-of-the-border establishment and our esophagi still cringed at the memory.

Bob Vasquez, co-owner, and his wife, who happened to be our waitress, assured us this would not happen at El Sombrero, that the clientele is 98 per cent non-Latin. Bob is Cuban; his partner and chef, Mike Bolivar, Mexican.

Featuring:

El Sombrero

THE HOT SAUCE is there for those who want it, but it's not already in or on the food.

We began a leisurely Sunday supper with guacamole, a smooth avocado dip; a basket of crisp, toasted tortilla chips; and hot nachos, a sort of small Mexican pizza covered with mashed beans and melted cheese — delicious! (Flip off the four slivers of hot pepper — they are only there for those who can tolerate them.)

Other appetizers offered were tamales, camarones al ajillo (shrimps in garlic sauce), shrimp cocktail, black bean soup, avocado salad and taquito (Mexican egg roll with the house sauce, topped with cheese and a dash of guacamole). They ranged in price from 90 cents to $1.95.

YOLANDA'S EYES LIT up at the mention of black bean soup, which she ordered and we all sampled. "Very good" was her verdict. We agreed. We all nibbled at her lettuce salad and found the house dressing delicious. Her entree, $4.25, consisted of skirt steak, chopped lettuce, and a cheese enchilada with sour cream.

Her husband found his pepper steak, $4.25, to his liking. At the suggestion of the waitress, my husband and I ordered one of the two possible combination plates, both best sellers. Ours, at $3.50, consisted of a chicken taco, a beef enchilada with a dollop of sour cream, and a tostada (a crisp flat corn tortilla covered with beans, chopped lettuce, and topped with ground meat and cheddar cheese).

THIS ENTREE, AS all the others, was served with rice and refried beans, with plenty of flat tortillas handy on which to spread them.

Dessert was delightful. Vasquez, who worked 14 years with the Jacques group of French restaurants, made the flan himself. A cool custard with caramel sauce, it was light and tasty. My husband enjoyed the sopapilla, a light, flaky pastry with no filling other than honey. The usual ice cream dishes were also offered, with no dessert higher than 75 cents.

The menu listed a wide variety of tacos, enchiladas, carnes y pollos (chicken and meat) and mariscos (seafood). On Wednesday nights a special dinner is featured for $4.25. It includes filet mignon, cheese enchilada, lettuce and tomato garnish, rice and beans, and beverage.

EL SOMBRERO IS located at 668 Wolf Rd., ust south of Central Road. Candles, mellow lights, red table runners, spindle-back chairs with woven straw seats and soft Mexican music in the background add to the pleasure of dining. Vasquez suggests you bring your own wine.

The restaurant is closed Monday, open 3 to 10 p.m. Sunday and 11:30 a.m. to 11 p.m. all other days. We were pleased with the portions, pleased with the food, and pleased with the entree prices, none of which exceeded $4.25.

It's a good Mexican restaurant. Yolanda says so.

Brad Dourif and Sidney Lassick

A couple of high-flying cuckoos

by DICK KLEINER

It's an old Hollywood tradition that a big hit movie makes stars out of everybody in it. An actor can give a tremendous performance in a flop, but that doesn't mean a thing. But give him a bit role in a huge hit and he's off and running.

The big hit of '75 — carrying over into '76 — was "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest," which took top honors at the Academy Awards. And the tradition is working overtime on that one.

Co-producer Michael Douglas is giving up his acting career, on the strength of "Cuckoo," to concentrate on his first love, producing. Director Milos Forman is now the most sought-after director in Hollywood, and the honors are piling up on his mantel piece.

Jack Nicholson already was a star;

Brad Dourif

now he's bigger than ever. Louise Fletcher, a total unknown, has become a lady who can pick and choose parts.

THE JOY EXTENDS even down to the supporting players. Brad Dourif, who played young Billy Bibbit, got an Academy Award nomination. Sidney Lassick, the tearful Cheswick of the piece, could easily have gotten one.

Both of the men are now in the enviable position of getting lots of offers. For Dourif, the young actor, this means the beginning of what will probably be a long and noble career. The golden opportunity, however, is even more dramatic for Lassick, who is no youngster.

His life and what's happened to him since "Cuckoo," could easily make a movie in itself. Sidney Lassick is a man who dreamed of acting but, apparently, was never going to realize that dream.

He's from Chicago and his big claim to fame, until now, was that he's Shecky Greene's cousin. As a boy, he always wanted to act and was always fascinated by movies.

"I lived across the street from a little theater, the Grand," he says. "I'd deliver leaflets for the owner, and he'd let me in to see all the movies free. I went every day, and I became a big movie buff."

HE ACTED IN high school. At 13, he ran away to California to crash Hollywood, but they brought him home. He went into the Army and when he was discharged, came to California for good.

He went to the Pasadena Playhouse and was spotted in a play by an agent, who signed him. He was immediately put in a starring role in a film, but the film was never released.

"That set my career back 30 years," Lassick says.

He was never again able to get a foothold in the movie business. Over the ensuing three decades, he has had a few tiny roles in tiny films. To support himself, he worked as a clerk in a trucking firm. And he's still got that job today.

For the fun of it, he went to the audition for parts in "Cuckoo," and he surprised even himself by landing a good part.

"The film," he says, "has made me hot. It's a big break and I hope to cash in on it. In fact, I'm even thinking of giving up my job with the trucking firm."

HE HAS A NICE role in "Carrie," a major film starring Sissy Spacek and marking Piper Laurie's return to Hollywood. He's also been cast in a role on the Serpico pilot for a TV series. And he says, director Steven Spielberg ("Jaws" wants him for a part in his next film.

"Right now," he says, "I'm hanging on to my job with the trucking firm. Even though I'm a bachelor, I'm very security-conscious and I'm reluctant to burn my bridges behind me."

Brad Dourif's story is different. Young, good-looking and talented, almost certain to get a break sooner or later. It happened sooner.

He's from Huntington, W.Va., and he frankly admits he's "independently wealthy," which is always helpful. His family has a plant there making ultramarine, a blue dye.

He says he wasn't very good in school, and that fact ultimately worked to his advantage. He had wanted to go to Carnegie Tech, to study acting, but his grades weren't good enough to get him in. Instead, he went to his home town college — Marshall — for a year but then quit and went to New York.

"AT THE TIME I left," he says, "my father was running for the West Virginia state senate as a Republican, and I was something of an embarrassment to him — I was a long-haired hippie, active in campus politics. So I don't think they were upset when I left home."

Sidney Lassick

In New York, he studied acting for four years. He did a few things off-Broadway and one of them was a hit — "When Are You Coming Back, Red Ryder?" Then he went to the auditions for "Cuckoo."

He says Milos Forman conducted the auditions as though they were in a group therapy session, such as the ones in the film.

"Forman would say, 'I'll be Big Nurse, you be patients,' and then we'd all have to improvise things. He'd keep feeding us some lines, but we'd have to build on them. I went back three times."

Like Lassick, he's had many offers since "Cuckoo" burst through. The Oscar nomination accelerated that trend. Since the film he's done a play and a show for PBS, and he's signed to do another PBS production. He's being careful about what he accepts.

"I WANT TO BE a star and I want to make big money," he says, "But above all I want to do parts through which I can grow as an actor."

He doubts he'll do a TV series, although he's had some feelers already. The main reason for that is it takes him a long time to get ready for a part.

"I'm a slow study to begin with," he says. "But I also do a lot of work. For 'Cuckoo,' I had been in therapy so I knew something about what to expect.

"But I found most of the inmates (the movie was shot at a mental hospital in Oregon) were not as crazy as our crazies."

Silver Fox in comeback but stays close to home

by BRUCE NICHOLS

Charlie Rich, the Colt, Ark., farm boy who made good in pop-country music, says he's slowing down after three tough years on the make.

"Last year was probably one of the roughest we ever had," says the silver-haired singer-pianist

In addition to working to exhaustion on the road, Rich, for whom "Behind Closed Doors" ended 20 years in honky-tonks, got some sour publicity and came close to ending his 23-year marriage.

He made a scene on national television, burning an envelope naming John Denver as Country Music Association "Entertainer of the Year." He had an encounter with an autograph seeker who accused him of roughing her up.

The way he talks now, though, his biggest problems are an expanding waistline and following up on his first gospel album, entitled "Silver Linings."

"EVERYTHING seems to be getting better," he says. Now 43, Rich says he has cut back on touring to spend more time at home. "I don't like to make rash statements, but I do think we know a little bit better how to handle things."

Rich dismisses the CMA awards ceremony incident as the result of exhaustion and pain-killing drugs he was taking for a foot injury. He bluntly says the autograph seeker was lying.

"It (burning the envelope) was a mistake," he says. "But it has been blown out of proportion. I have read stories that I was drunk and that's a damned lie. It was no reflection on John Denver or anybody else.

"I voted for John Denver. I think he's a fine artist and a fine musician."

Rich says he and his wife, Margaret Ann, the childhood sweetheart he married at Forrest City, Ark., in 1952, are working out their problems since she filed and then withdrew a divorce petition last November.

"The traveling and the things that built up had bothered our home life," he says. "At one time we thought there wasn't any way we could make it with the pressures we had.

"AND WE THOUGHT that it might be better for Jack (age 9, the only one of four children still at home) if we did divorce," he says.

"But I think we can make it. I don't want to say, 'Yeah, we're gonna make it' and you read next week that we're divorced. But we're both trying real hard, as we have to."

Besides, he says, he and his wife are enjoying their first grandchild, Margaret Suzanne, born to his oldest daughter, Mrs. Renee Carver, in January.

His granddaughter "has taken priority over everything else" recently, but Rich is excited about the new album, a musical shifting of gears.

"Billy Sherrill (his producer with Epic) and I have this thing of having been brought up in the same scene," he says. "Billy's dad was a Baptist preacher and I grew up in a Baptist home. We always talked about doing country and black blues-gospel material."

The album includes standards like "Just a Closer Walk With Thee" and "Amazing Grace," done with the Rich touch and backed by The Jordanaires, The Nashville Edition and The Holladays.

RICH WAS BACK in Nashville recently for three days of recording toward another pop-country-crossover album.

"But I'm so enthused about this gospel album that there are some cuts on it I'd rather have out, or at least give them a chance as a single."

Will "The Silver Fox" who helped lead the country cross-over to the popular charts lead gospel in the same direction?

"I'd love to," he says. "I never did go along with the categorization scene, the old died-in-the-wool country thing of never changing it.

"I sort of grw up in the hills of Arkansas, hearing nothing but strings and people blowing on jugs and, you know, I love it. But is that where we're going to stop or are we going to try and do something different?"

Arlington Theatre to open again

ARLINGTON PARK THEATRE will reopen in time for Memorial Day weekend under a new producing team, HARVEY MEDLINSKY and WALTER PERNER JR.

The official opening day is May 28 though there is no confirmation yet as to what production or billed star will be featured. An announcement is expected the beginning of next week since rehearsals begin Thursday.

According to Medlinsky and Perner, the theater will continue to operate on a year-round basis generally featuring four to six-week engagements with well-known celebrities.

Medlinsky is familiar with Arlington having directed numerous plays under previous producer David Lonn, including "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest" which set local Joseph Jefferson Award records in 1973.

ELIZABETH R. WOODMAN, who has been acting as a casting consultant to the Goodman Theatre Center, has been named general manager of the theater.

JOSEPH KANE, general manager of the Arlington Park Hilton Hotel, predicts a great deal of "cooperation" between the hotel and theater. Yet though Hilton will oversee the theater leasing agreement for Madison Square Garden Corp., owners of the theater-hotel-race track complex, "We have no power whatsoever over what is produced in the theater. Nor do we want to. We are hotel experts," said Kane.

More new developments. The Top of the Towers has been renamed THE TOP OF THE HILTON and currently features a jazz combo, RAY PAPAI'S NIRVANOVA. A new summer season of entertainment is being kicked off May 25 with PRENTIS MINNER & COMPANY up first followed by JIMMY DAMON June 15. Later this month a new menu for the room is also being introduced.

Though CAFE ANGELO in Wheeling has been celebrating its grand opening all week, festivities climax tonight when the Riviera-style, restaurant introduces live entertainment. Cabaret singer VALUCHA will perform three shows nightly Fridays and Saturdays through May in the nightclub, intimate ZE CLUB, adjacent to the dining room.

Who's coming to town? PHYLLIS DILLER. She opens Monday for 12 nights in the BLUE MAX of the HYATT REGENCY O'HARE.

BILLY DEE WILLIAMS is currently starring in "I HAVE A DREAM," a drama about Dr. Martin Luther King now playing at ARIE CROWN THEATER and SHELLEY WINTERS also opened this week in "KENNEDY'S CHILDREN" at the STUDEBAKER THEATRE.

The doctor says

by Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Calcium won't cure or prevent arthritis

I have been advised by friends to take bone meal as a preventative and a cure for arthritis. It is from a health food store and contains mostly Vitamin D and calcium and bone marrow. One friend in her 70s broke her hip and was dancing four months later. She had taken bone meal for 15 years. Is there really any value in this medicine for arthritis and brittle bones? Is so much calcium harmful?

Perhaps the problem is in your definition of arthritis. Certainly I recommend a high calcium intake for women who have osteoporosis, the problem of dissolving bone tissue that leads to collapses of vertebrae and increased tendency for fractures. This is a common problem, particularly in small Anglo Saxon women past the menopause. Calcium deficiency will increase the likelihood of having this problem five times over a person getting adequate amounts of calcium, specifically the amount found in one quart of milk a day.

The combination of calcium and Vitamin D is helpful in treating osteoporosis. Some people use this in conjunction with fluoride. The fluoride strengthens the bones in the skeleton just as it strengthens the formation of the teeth, particularly in their early development.

Having said that, let me emphatically state that taking calcium will not cure degenerative arthritis or osteoarthritis as it is commonly called. That is an entirely different process and as we view it now is essentially a wear and tear disease. That's why it affects the weight bearing joints such as the hips and knees.

ARTHRITIS SPURS develop around degenerated vertebrae or joints. These are not formed because of excess calcium at all. The bone is first destroyed and the spur is formed by an imperfect attempt of the bone to regenerate itself. The spurs and deformed bone structures may cause pressure on nerves passing out of the spine from the spinal cord. This can cause pain and other symptoms. True overgrowth of bone tissue is rare. Almost always there must first be bone degeneration.

For more information about degenerative arthritis send 50 cents for The Health Letter number 4-10, Osteoarthritis: Degenerative or Wear and Tear Arthritis. Send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing. Address your letter to me in care of Paddock Publications, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Finally, I'd like to say that there is a general misconception about all the harm that can be done by taking a reasonably large amount of calcium in your diet. The simple truth is that the digestive tract is a remarkable filter. Individuals who have too much calcium in the food they ingest simply won't be able to absorb enough to cause any damage to the body.

The normal person is supposed to stay in calcium balance. That literally means that he eliminates the same amount of calcium from the body as he takes in. This statement applies only to adults of course. In the growing stages or in the mending stage of a broken bone the body needs to retain excess calcium for either growth or repair.

Rigorous brushing may rid chenille of lint

Dear Dorothy: I have a chenille bedspread that has been shedding ever since I started using it. I've washed it twice, but it still sheds. Any ideas on this problem?—Mrs. J. A. Moore

This isn't unusual with certain of these spreads. The only cures I've run into involve hard brushing. One correspondent washed such a spread, hung it on a line — end to end — with the chenille on the outside and went to work on it with a clean broom. It was swept as hard as possible during the drying. There was some fear the tufts might come out, but the sweeping didn't hurt it, and the report was that the spread ceased its shedding. Another report had to do with the use of a nylon clothes brush, again employing vigorous stroking. Try it.

Dear Dorothy: Whenever I see a lovely piece of silver at an auction, I hesitate about buying it if it has initials on it. I'm told these can be removed. Is this true?—Janine Cash

A good silversmith will have no trouble with this if the piece is sterling. There is much more silver to work with.

Dear Dorothy: I've been intrigued by all the hints from readers on how to cook beans so they are easier to digest. Did you know that the good Greek cooks serve coleslaw with beans so that there will be no after effects?—Carole Ebenstein

Dear Dorothy: The edges of my rug keep curling up. I'm afraid someone will trip. Any way to correct it?—Frances Hagan

Yes. Roll in the opposite direction, dampen slightly, then put on a piece of clear plastic covered with some weights.

(Mrs. Ritz welcomes questions and hints. If a personal reply is required, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Write to Dorothy Ritz in care of Suburban Living, Paddock Publications, Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006.)

AAUW schedules spring luncheon

State Representatives Eugenia Chapman, D, and Virginia Macdonald, R, will be speakers at the spring luncheon sponsored by Arlington Heights Branch of the American Association of University Women Saturday, May 15, at noon in Methodist Church of the Incarnation, 330 W. Golf Rd., Arlington Heights.

They will share views on the current legislative session and their own particular concerns for the future.

Also at the luncheon five members will be honored by being designated named-gift recipients to the Susan B. Anthony American Endowment Fund of the Fellowships Program. The program is administered nationally and awards financial aid to applicants working towards advanced degrees or doing research on a socially significant project.

Proceeds from the successful used book sale in November were donated to AAUW headquarters in the names of Jean Wittkoff, Joy Stockham, Jan Dahl, Sabra Patterson and Pat Scudder in recognition of their outstanding service to the branch.

Tickets are $2.50 and may be purchased by calling Nancy Murtaugh, 397-3239. None will be sold at the door.

Knots in trees are old 'wounds'

Andy sends the Encyclopaedia Britannica's 1976 Yearbook of Science and the Future to Karen MacKennon, 12, of Coventry, R.I., for her question: HOW DO KNOTS FORM IN WOOD?

After a tree has been cut down, a look at the stump tells the story of how and when the living tree did its growing. The circular lines tell you how old the tree was and give a fair indication of the tree's good years and its lean years. With a little practice, you can tell when the tree was growing in shade and when it got its fair share of sunshine. Perhaps you may even see where a branch had fallen off and the tree sealed the wound.

Trees grow in two directions — up and out. Many people think that trees grow up by gradually lengthening the entire trunk, but this is not the case. Trees grow tall by adding new growth at the top. Each year the tiptop of the trunk grows a bud which contains a leafy green stem. As the bud swells and finally opens, the stem begins to grow, making the tree taller. Branches grow in the same way.

The trunk of the tree grows out, or thicker, as long as the tree lives. And a special layer of tissue just inside the bark is responsible for this growth. This special layer of tissue is called the cambium. During the growing season the cells of the cambium divide rapidly. These cells produce a ring around the trunk called an annual ring. By counting the annual rings, it is possible to tell how old the tree was.

Branches growing out from the trunk of the tree grow in the same way the trunk does. Each year the branches send out new growth at the tips and also around the limbs. Sometimes a branch will break off. When this happens the trunk seals the wound with a tacky resin, or sap. Each year, as new growth is added to the trunk, the gummy knot that sealed the wound is buried deeper inside the tree.

As years go by, the knot is no longer visible from the outside of the tree. The only way to tell that it was ever there is to cut the tree down and saw it up for lumber. Some trees are highly prized for the knotty appearance of the lumber. Knotty pine is a fine example of this.

The sturdy evergreen pine trees keep their green needles the year round. These hearty trees need extra winter protection to help weatherpoof them against the cold winter snows. Waxy substances to coat the needles and tacky resins to seal out the cold are just the way. These gummy resins also help to seal the wounds made by branches that have broken off. In time, the wound is sealed inside the tree and is seen as a knot in the lumber.

Andy sends a Student Globe to Akrum Ghadban, 13, of Ottawa, Ont., Canada, for his question: WHEN WAS THE WORLD'S FIRST SATELLITE SENT UP?

The world's first artificial satellite was launched into space by Russia on Oct. 4, 1957. It was called Sputnik I after a Russian word meaning traveler. This initial effort was later followed by much larger Sputniks. Sputnik I weighed 184 pounds and had a diameter of 22.8 inches. It circled the earth about once every 95 minutes at a speed of 18,000 miles per hour. Three months later, on Jan. 4, 1958, it fell to the earth.

Since Sputnik I, the United States and Russia have launched many more satellites. Great Britain and Canada each joined forces with the United States in 1962 to send up satellites which studied and mapped the earth's ionosphere. Many satellites record valuable weather information. Others provide communication data and services such as television relays. Still others orbit faraway celestial bodies such as the moon, the sun and various planets, providing heretofore unavailable facts about our vast solar system.

LEGEND OF A LADY

The maker of the first Stars and Stripes remains a mystery. The cherished American tradition is that Betsy Ross was given that task by General Washington himself.

No authentic records of time, however, substantiate the story. The annals of the Continental Congress do not. Nor do the personal writings of anyone, including General Washington. All that is known of Betsy Ross is that she was paid 14 pounds, 12 shillings and twopence by the Pennsylvania State Naval Board in May, 1777, for making ships colors.

How then, did the legend begin?

Surprisingly, Betsy Ross' supposed connection with the first Stars and Stripes was completely unknown until 1870, almost 100 years after the alleged event, when William J. Canby, grandson of Mrs. Ross, read a paper before the Philadelphia Historical Society. Canby's paper was based primarily on recollections of conversations he'd had with his grandmother prior to her death in 1836, when he was 11 and she 84.

It was an appealing tale, and artists and storytellers of the day were quick to embellish it. No one seemed inclined to dispute it even though the evidence speaks against it.

But the legend has become so widespread and charming that it is still taught in many schools today.

Here a president...there a president

by JOAN HANAUER

NEW YORK (UPI)—Not long ago CBS created a stir when it named a new president of the CBS Television Network. The uninitiated thought that meant a new man was in charge of CBS, but that's because they have been brainwashed by high school civics.

Anyone who knows network corporate structure could see at a glance the new president had three bosses.

They are William S. Paley, chairman of the board of CBS, Arthur R. Taylor, president of CBS, and John A. Schneider, president of the CBS broadcast group.

The new network prexy, Robert Wussler, reports to Schneider, as do the presidents of CBS News, CBS Radio Network and the CBS Television Stations Division (the CBS owned and operated stations).

ABC HAS SURPASSED the other network in presidents — ABC has 10 presidents in the broadcast area, a chairman and two presidents in its record business, and assorted presidents of other nonbroadcast affiliates.

NBC is low man on the presidential totem pole, with only five presidents to back up board Chairman Julian Goodman.

That doesn't make NBC a smaller broadcast entity — just that NBC is part of a huge parent company named RCA.

THE UNTUTORED might get the idea that the networks just took a group of vice presidents and made them presidents — in a less welll-paying industry one might say in lieu of a raise.

If that's true, however, there were an awful lot of lemmings left to fill the gap. CBS says it has 218 vice presidents, ABC about 90 (not counting non-broadcast divisions), and NBC about 100.

Queen lead proves correct

Win at bridge

by Oswald and Jim Jacoby

Here is another hand to separate the men from the boys. Not that it represents anything of real importance. South is in a nice, comfortable three notrump contract and is sure of 10 tricks come hell or high water.

He wins the heart lead in dummy and is going to lead a club at trick two. He ordinary, careless player leads a low one and lays an honor after East plays low. West shows out and now our careless player will only collect three club tricks.

The careful player will lead the queen of clubs first. He will have noted that if West holds all five clubs there will be no way to get four tricks there, but that if East holds all five this queen play will make it possible to finesse twice against the nine-eight.

These little differences don't mean anything most of the time, but they do distinguish the really good players from the others.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:
A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Already a TV-singing success

Star Travolta — at 22, he's charted his career

by TOM VON MALDER

The grin. walk and mannerisms are the same, but there is more than the not-so-bright "sweathog" Vinnie Barbarino to actor-singer John Travolta.

Behind the exterior that has become identified with the casual, cool, street-wise high school student of television's "Welcome Back, Kotter" is an intelligent awareness that has lent itself to a multifacted career and record contracts with "creative control."

The 22-year-old star certainly is enjoying the sudden popularity his weekly television role has brought. It was evident in his clowning for a photog-g rapher and in his patient posing for pictures with everyone at the RCA Records luncheon in Chiago Thursday, prior to his Woodfield Shopping Center appearance.

TRAVOLTA WAS on a whirlwind tour to prmote his first record album and the interviews have been coming almost constantly. But even an often-repeated question about his background draws a patient, thoughtful response.

"I've been asked this a couple of hundred times lately. Let me think . . . I want to try to make it interesting for me," he said.

"I grew up in Englewood, N.J. There were six kids, three boys and three girls. The three girls and myself are in show business."

Travolta's mother used to sing live on radio in the 1930s as part of The Sunshine Sisters and Travolta sings one of their favorites, "It Had To Be You," on the album and dedicates it to them.

"MY MOTHER always did local theater, summer stock and she taught drama."

At the "tender" age of 12, Travolta got his first part in a play. He was hooked.

'I used to take the afternoon off from school to go to New York and audition for shows. And I started to get some parts."

There was "Bye Bye Birdie" in summer stock at age 16, followed by

JOHN TRAVOLTA

"The Boy Friend," television commercials and several off-Broadway roles. At 17, he went to Hollywood, getting parts in episodes of television's "Emergency" and "Owen Marshall."

THE ROAD COMPANY of the rock musical, "Grease," led to his first Broadway role at age 18. Since then he has appeared in the Andrews Sisters' musical," "Over Here," several more television shows and the movie, "The Devil's Rain."

Then came "Kotter."

How much of Travolta is there in Barbarino? "Only the emotions, which make Vinnie almost a vulnerable character. I started off with a cool, tough-guy image. Then I added touches of emotion here and there."

Travolta said he does not have an identity crisis with Barbarino. "It depends on the situation. About half the time it's John Travolta, and half it's Vinnie Barbarino. They see me on television each week as Barbarino. How else are they expected to know me?"

THAT COULD change, though, and Travolta is working hard at it. With his record and a new movie coming out this summer, "I've got plenty enough to let them know the name Travolta."

Travolta plays Billy Nolan, a mid-western farm boy in the film, "Carrie." "He's kind of a bully, but also a stud. It's a whole different character than Barbarino."

Movies are an important part of Travolta's career plans, as is the stage where he will do "Bus Stop" this summer.

"I have marked up my career into quarters — music, television, movies and the stage. I really like it all. I want a four-part career. It keeps my interest up.

"I WANT TO EXCEL in the four areas. There's no reason to shut off any one area."

Travolta's first album mainly has a soft-rock sound that he said was as deliberate as his bare-chested cover picture, which he boasts as his idea.

"I want to appeal to all ages. Oh, definitely.

"I didn't want a rock sound. I didn't want to become identified with rock. I want to do all kinds of music. Maybe a country album for the second one, then something else."

TRAVOLTA SAID his record contract enables him to record what he wants. "They call it 'creative control.' "

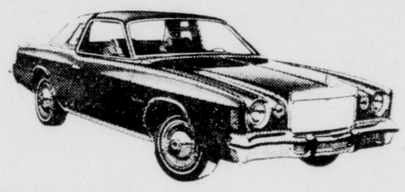

Although he has had guest appearances on variety shows, Travolta feels his main televison exposure will be "Kotter" for some time. "I think it has a long life. I don't know how long we can stay in high school, though, and continue to be realistic."

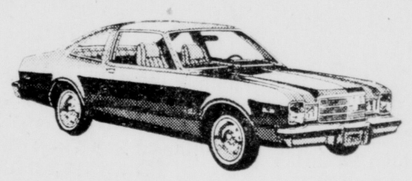

That edge of realism extends behind all Travolta's career decisions and ambitions. He may be only 22, but he's not star-struck.

Boys, girls combined for Falcon feature

by ART MUGALIAN
Track and Field Editor

Bill Mohrmann's dream will materialize today at 4:30 when the 11th annual Falcon Invitational Track Meet gets under way at Forest View High School.

Mohrmann, the Forest View boys track coach, has reshaped this nine-team meet into the state's first completely integrated girls-boys track invite. The Falcon coach has waited three years for tonight — and now it's here.

Billed as "the track meet with international scoring," the Falcon Invitational title will go to the team that scores the most points on the boys and girls levels combined. Last year, the scoring was kept separate. It was the first time girls had run in the Falcon Invite.

Conant, Elk Grove, Fremd, Hersey, Prospect, Wheeling, Maine North, St. Viator-Sacred Heart, and the host Falcons will vie for the huge first and second place trophies. Fremd would seem to be the favorite in this meet. The Vikings' girls and boys are both ranked up among the top three in the Mid-Suburban League. But, as Mohrmann maintains, it'-s hard to tab a sure winner.

"No one really knows what to expect," Mohrmann said. "But I know a lot of the boys coaches are checking into their girls teams to make sure they're ready. There's an awful lot of excitement building for this meet.

"Most of all, it's supposed to be fun," the Falcon coach continued. "The competition will take care of itself. Already, the kids are developing their own level of competition for this meet. We've got the guys working with the girls and that's good for track."

Mohrmann's own team would be among tonight's favorites except for a rash of injuries on the girls squad, including Renee Gromke, last year's 110-yard low hurdles champ.

But the Forest View boys are ready. Steve Schellenberger will run the 220-yard dash, the 440 and the 880, and he may have an outside shot at shattering the meet record in the 880. With St. Viator's Steve Kastner, Fremd's Dan Tischler and Maine North's Chris Heroux running with him in the fast heat, Schellenberger could get under the 1:54.1 mark posted by Bill Jarocki of Fremd in 1971.

Another record that could be bettered tonight is the boys high hurdles mark of :14.3, set in 1969 by Arlington's Dave Steele. Now an assistant coach at Hersey, Steele will be on hand to see if Forest View's Jim Vartanian can eclipse his standard.

Vartanian, who ran a :14.2 at Prospect last Friday, will probably face his strongest competition from Jim Wright of Prospect, Gary Gunderson of Fremd and Pat O'Brien of Elk Grove.

Another record that could topple is the 42-½ mark in the triple jump. Several triple jumpers, including the man who holds the record — Mike Harvey of Forest View — have surpassed 42 feet this year.

Harvey is the top seed in the event, but close behind are Dave Koelper of Hersey, Brad Millar of Prospect, Dave Smedley of Fremd and Tony Becker of Hersey.

Fremd's depth on the boys level could team with the strength of the Viking girls to produce an unbeatable combination.

Sprinters Dave Snow and Dave Talaber, weightman Al DaValle, low hurdler Dan Mosby pole vaulter Tim Lincoln, and 440-man Randy Polomsky are among the Vikings who could provide first places. Also, high jumper Jim Hamill is seeded first in his event and long jumper Lawson England, last year's district champion, is seeded No. 1

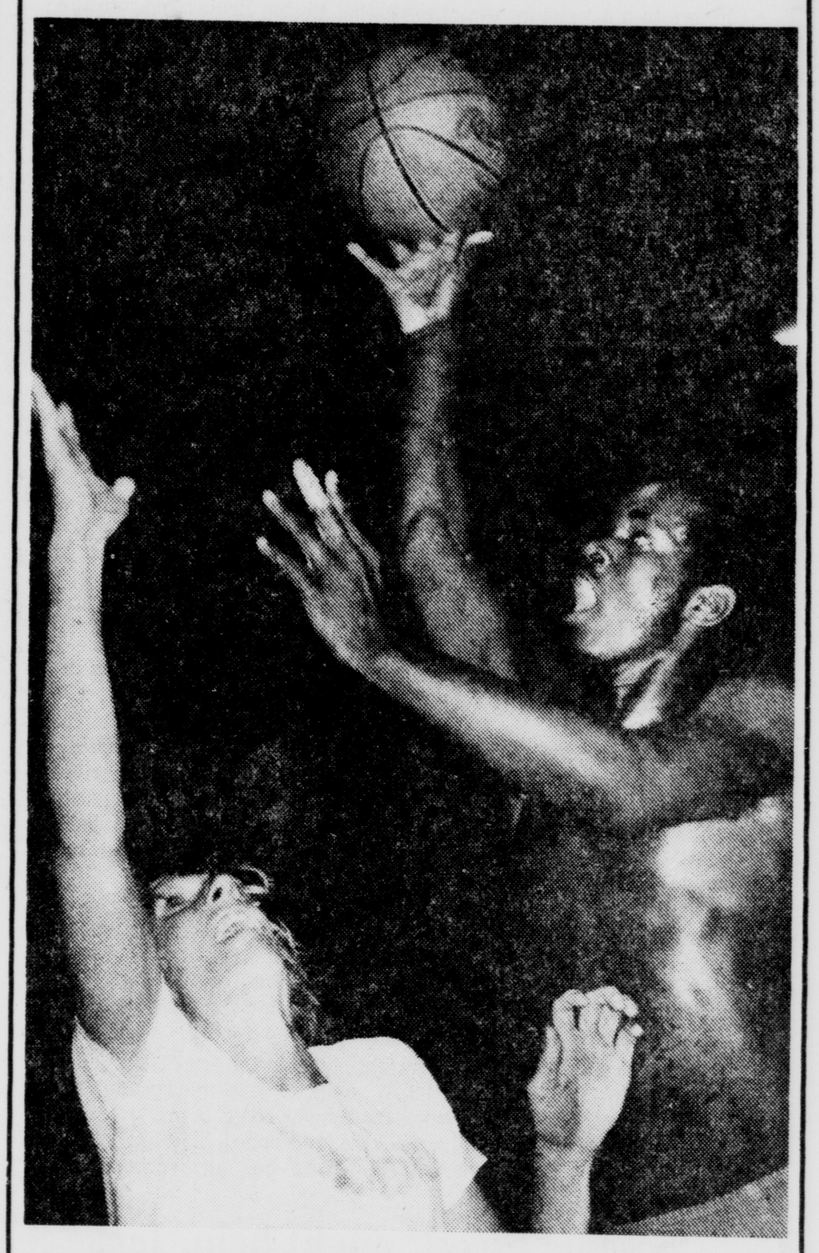

Fremd's girls are led by sprinter-hurdler Lisa Talaber, middle-distance runner Karin Bucaro, and an outstanding mile relay team.

Conant's two-time state shot put champion, Mary Ann Johnson, will be heavily favored to repeat her 1975 Falcon performance when she threw 43-3.

Wheeling's Gail Miloch, a winner last year in the mile and the 880, will be back to defend her titles in both events. And Miloch's teammate, sophomore Sandy Rainey, will be out to break the high jump record, which stands at 5-3½.

Hersey's girls are among the best squads entered in the meet. The Huskies are led by Kathy LaPorte, top-seeded in both hurdles events and the long jump, and Jody Stembridge, who has the best time in the 880.

Finals are scheduled to begin at 6:50 p.m.

ALL-STARS IN ACTION. West Aurora's Ron Hicks shoots over East Leyden's Glen Grunwald during practice at Lions Park in Mount Prospect. These two all-staters and many others will be performing at Buffalo Grove High School Saturday night as an all-city team meets an all-suburban squad.

Orr to Black Hawks for three players?

From Herald Wire Services

Bobby Orr, sidelined star of the Boston Bruins, is to be traded to the Chicago Black Hawks for three players, the Lynn (Mass.) Daily Item reported Thursday in a copyrighted story.

The Item said in a story by Tom Dalton that Bruins' General Manager Harry Sinden flew to Chicago to finalize compensation negotiations that would swap Orr for Phil Russell, Ivan Boldirev and John Marks.

Sinden and Bruins' officials were not available for comment.

President Bill Wirtz of the Black Hawks said there was no truth to the report. "Neither Tommy (Ivan), Billy (Reay) or I have talked to the Bruins," he said.

Orr has missed much of this season because of a knee injury and will become a free agent June 1 because of not signing a contract.

Orr, 28, rated by some observers as the greatest hockey player ever, is the only defenseman to ever lead the National Hockey League in scoring twice, 1970 and 1975. He was the league's most valuable player three straight years but has been plagued by knee problems throughout his career.

Orr was voted Boston's greatest professional athlete of all time by fans in a newspaper poll.

Russell, 23, a defenseman, was Chicago's first round draft pick four years ago. Defenseman wing Mark, 28, joined the Black Hawks in 1972.

Boldirev, a center, played with the Bruins in 1970 and 1971 before being traded to California. He was sent to Chicago two years ago.

Why do you hang on, Henry Aaron?

Bob Frisk
Sports Editor

The impact was there in just a short film clip on the television news.

Hank Aaron, the great Hank Aaron, was swinging wildly at a pitch. He looked too heavy and the swing just wasn't the same.

This wasn't the Hank Aaron I wanted to remember.

That entire sequence, flashed over a few seconds, dramatically illustrated how sad it is to see a great performer in his final days.

Aaron will get his hits and a few home runs for Milwaukee this year. But as he swings around the league, the people seeing him for the first time will not be able to appreciate this man's incredible skills, his timing, reflexes.

Time has taken care of that.

When that short film clip showed Aaron actually looking bad at the plate, I began to wonder just how many professional athletes have ever retired on top? Think about it. How many have quit cold, just like that, not because they had to, but because they wanted to?

The name of Sandy Koufax may come up, but Koufax quit because of arm trouble at age 30 despite a fantastic 27-9 record the previous season.

Ted Williams quit after hitting .316 and finished in style, hitting a home run in his final time at bat. But Williams was 42 years old so didn't really step out in his peak years.

Two boxers quit while they were on top, Rocky Marciano and Gene Tunney. Both retired undefeated world heavyweight champs, Tunney at age 30 and Marciano at 32.

Marciano's purses grossed $1.7 million but in four years he had seen his wife only 152 days.

"My lonesome family convinced me that I should quit while I'm still in good shape," Rocky said later. "I was proud of being champion and I was determined never to get out of condition."

Those are the exceptions. There are other examples.

Jack Dempsey was fighting until he was 45, and Jack Johnson was fighting exhibitions until he was 67. Bill Tilden played tournament tennis well into his 50's.

Remember the great Joe Louis, flabby and balding, losing to Ezzard Charles in the ring and announcing he would never fight again? He did fight again — and was knocked out by a young Marciano.

Who wants to remember Joe Louis flat on his back?

I didn't really enjoy watching such talented performers as Ernie Banks and Willie Mays labor through their final years. They were so great at one time but so limited in their production as injuries and age took their toll.

I always admired Bob Gibson when he was firing fastballs and winning pressure games for the St. Louis Carinals, but it was a pathetic sight to watch this great talent actually demoted to the bullpen.

Muhammad Ali is a tremendous boxer, perhaps the finest of all time, but he can go on just so long That was obvious last Friday night in the so-called "fight" with Jimmy Young, and it would be tragic to have Ali, now at age 34, remembered for being overweight and out of shape.

In a reflective mood, Ali admitted after the fight that "age does play some tricks on you. Age does move in on you."

Bill Bradley, the professional basketball star with the New York Knicks, is a Princeton graduate, a Rhodes scholar, and he would have no trouble landing a position in the real world. Why does he continue to play basketball in his 30's? Is it just the money?

Bradley stresses in his new book, "Life On the Run," that the ultimate satisfaction is when the team performs as a paragon, everything in balance and harmony. He feels this experience keeps him going at his age even as his skills have begun to diminish.

Bradley dreads that final basketball game, observing that the athlete "approaches the end of his playing days the way old people approach death. He puts his finances in order. He reminisces easily. He offers advice to the young. But the athlete differs from the old person in that he must continue living."

Nobody likes to give up a good thing. Nobody making good money and enjoying the prestige and popularity that normally goes with being a professional athlete wants to throw it over for a 9 to 5 job.

Jockey Johnny Longden, who won over 6,000 races in 40 years of riding thoroughbred horses, said, "Anybody who quits what he's doing while he's still able is going to get old pretty fast. Once you get off horses, you're just a bowlegged little man walking around."

Athletes enjoy being in the spotlight, the center stage, and so many just don't know how to leave gracefully.

Robin Roberts, who pitched until he was 39, struggling in those final years, feels today he stayed on too long.

"I can see it now, but I couldn't see it then," he said. "I guess it's only natural for everyone to try to keep going as long as he can."

Maybe it is only natural, but there's still something very pathetic about watching the superstars of sport hang on.

The decline itself is part of any athlete's experience. It requires someone of uncommon character to remove himself voluntarily from the sports arena while he's still capable of playing and commanding a big salary.

EVERYTHING IS a little more difficult these days for superstar Hank Aaron as he engages in another season of aging under the shelter of designated hitter and occasional regular with Milwaukee. Maybe it's only natural for atheltes to try to keep going as long as they can, but the decline of a superstar's skills can be a very sad spectacle.

Suburban, city stars meet Saturday night in Buffalo Grove gym

by JIM COOK

Under the guise of schoolboy talent, it will be major college basketball at its finest.

Thirty of the finest senior prep basketball players ever reared in and around Chicago will unveil the reasons prominent university coaches slept at their doorsteps throughout last winter's recruiting war.

The superstars of the prep cage scene will grace Buffalo Grove's gymnasium Saturday night at 8 p.m. in a duel between city stealers and suburban stuffers.

The lightning quick Chicago squad is headlined by Illinois-bound All-Stater Levi Cobb who led Morgan Park to the Class AA basketball title with an 18.6 scoring average and silky-smooth moves in the pivot.

But Cobb will have a tough time stealing the show Saturday with the likes of crowd-pleasers 6-8 Eric Bowman, Len Williams, Carl Nicks, 6-10 Steve Krafcisin, 6-6 Robert Byrd and 6-3 Henry Tiggs on the same bench.

While the city slickers boast a wealth of speed, the suburbanites can do a little running of their own and may own a distinct advantage in the rebounding department.

The exceptionally tall country squad will be paced by 6-9, four-year All-Stater Glen Grunwald whose 27.2 scoring spree per game may earn him a starting spot on Indiana's defending NCAA champion outfit next winter.

If Grunwald isn't muscle enough for the Chicago 15, he'll be joined by 6-7 East Leyden teammate John Hendler, 6-9 Chuck Dahms, 6-6 Neil Bresnahan, 6-7 Bob Zyburt, 6-6 Del Yarbrough and 6-5 Ron Hicks.

The key play of the guards should be an interesting matchup with Chicagoans Williams of Harrison, who scored over 2,000 points in his career and Nicks, a 6-1 flash out of Englewood.

They'll be joined by Alonzo Johnson of Westinghouse, 6-4 Herman Hoskins of Phillips and 6-0 Percy Leonard from Orr.

Suburbanites will counter with the likes of flashy 6-0 Jamie Macahon who averaged 23.7 points for game for Ridgewood, former Fremd hustler Mark Lavin who tossed out eight assists a contest at East Leyden, Oak Park's Tom Norris and scoring machine Rob Judson of Zion-Benton.

The third annual event is sponsored by the Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. Chicago Boys Club which will initially bring the two powerhouse squads together tonight at Chicago State University, located at 95th and King Dr., at 8 p.m.

Tickets are still available for the premier clash at Buffalo Grove High School. Adults will be admitted for $2 while students can view the classic confrontation from $1.

Proceeds from the games will go to the Dr. King Boys Club.

Flyers-Habs final; Leach scores 5!

Reggie Leach scored a playoff record-tying five goals Thursday night to lead the defending Stanley Cup champion Philadelphia Flyers to a 6-3 victory over the visiting Boston Bruins and into the finals for the third straight year. They'll meet the Montreal Canadiens, 5-2 winners over the New York Islanders, in the finals beginning on Sunday.

When Leach scored his first goal at 5:45 of the first period, it was the ninth straight playoff game in which he had scored and broke the record set in 1952 and 1946 by the Canadiens' Maurice Richard. He also joined Richard and Darryl Sittler in the record book for most goals in a single playoff game, Sittler's coming last year.

But Leach, who scored 61 regular-season goals and set a record for goals scored by a right winger, was only getting started. He scored three goals in the second period to give the Flyers a 4-1 advantage, tying a playoff record for host goals in one period. Leach's four goals in the first two periods came on only six shots he had made on Boston goalie Gil Gilbert.

Steve Shutt, Murray Wilson and Serge Savard scored second period goals to lead hosting Montreal to a 5-2 victory over the New York Islanders and into the finals.

Shutt's second period goal, his first of two in the game, came at 3:38 of the stanza and gave the Habs a 1-0 lead. Guy Lafleur broke in on New York goalie Glenn Resch and the New York netminder gave the rebound right to Shutt who put it into the open corner of the net. They never trailed.

Celtics defeat Cavaliers, 111-99

Paul Silas scored 11 fourth quarter points while the Boston defense held Cleveland to four points over the first eight minutes in the final period, as the Celtics whipped the Cavaliers, 111-99, in the opening game of their NBA Eastern Conference Championship series in Boston. The score was tied, 77-77, after three periods before Boston accounted for nine of the first 11 points in the fourth quarter. Silas, who had 21 points in the game, scored a three-point play in that span to give Boston an 84-79 advantage after two minutes.

Until Nate Thurmond hit a basket 8:36 into the period, the Celtics had outscored Cleveland 19-4, with Silas netting nine of the points. Boston led by as many as 20 points, 109-98, with two minutes to play, but the Cavs ran off 10 of the next 12 points.

John Havlicek led all scorers with 26 points, and Jo Jo White added 20 for Boston.

Julius Erving scored eight straight points in the final 1½ minutes, blocked two shots and made two steals to give the hosting New York Nets a 117-111 victory over the Denver Nuggets and a 2-1 lead in the ABA championship series. Erving capped his 31-point performance with a steal, a full-court burst and an overhead one-handed stuff at the buzzer.

'Sesame Street' might help, Jack

Jack Nicklaus has been playing golf for a good long time now and he has seen about everything. At least until Thursday in Dallas.

"I guess I had better go back to school," said Nicklaus, "and learn how to count."

Nicklaus had not been on the golf course more than 15 minutes for his first round in the Byron Nelson Golf Classic Thursday before he had picked up a two stroke penalty. The penalty was assessed because Nicklaus was playing with one more than the legal maximum of 14 clubs in his golf bag.

Somehow the pitching wedge belonging to Australian golfer David Graham wound up in Nicklaus' bag and if it had not been discovered at the end of the first hole the Golden Bear might have wound up with a 36-stroke penalty — two strokes a hole for the entire round. As it was, Nicklaus finished with an even-par 71 — which would have been a 69 without the penalty. Leading the tourney was Mark Hayes with a 66.

Hamill to skate in Ice Capades

Champion skater Dorothy Hamill, who won the hearts of Americans at the 1976 Olympics, will give up her amateur standing to skate under a two-year contract with the Ice Capades, it was announced Thursday. Terms of the contract were not revealed.

The 19-year-old figure skating champion will perform between 25 and 28 weeks a year beginning with a Sept. 15 debut in Pittsburgh. She has also agreed to star in two entertainment specials for ABC, unrelated to the Ice Capades. One is scheduled to be aired in the last quarter of 1976 and the other early in 1977.

"I'll be able to be more creative now," she said after demonstrating a few of the turns that won her many medals. "I've always wanted to be in a show. I like to do a show to entertain

Amateur leads women's tourney

Amateur Debbie Massey, who has resisted a golf career because of her love for skiing, shot a three-under-par 69 Thursday for the first round lead in the $70,000 Women's International tournament at Hilton Head Island, S.C. Massey, the winner of three major amateur titles last year, birdied six of eight holes midway through her round for a one-stroke lead on Jan Stephenson, a two-time winner on the LPGA tour this year, and Mary Lou Crocker, who has won just once in 10 years.

Boxer's bra problem sets up kayo

When boxer Caroline Svendsen dropped her guard to fix her bra, she caught a right to the chin from which she never recovered. Svendsen, 35, Virginia City, Nev., was stopped at 1:26 of the second round by Ersi Arvizo of Los Angeles in a special event fight in Nevada. Svendsen, believed to be the first woman ever to be licensed to box, had won three straight fights up until now.

"I blew it," she said after the fight. "I forgot everything I learned." Svendsen, who intends to continue boxing, said the bra will have to be redesigned so it will not slip during the fight.

ABA throws out Virginia Squires

The Virginia Squires, teetering on financial ruin once again this year, were finally eliminated Thursday from the American Basketball Association by Commissioner Dave DeBusschere "for failure to meet obligations to the league and its players."

The ABA Board of Trustees also granted approval to the Spirits of St. Louis to move the franchise to Salt Lake City, home of the Utah Stars for four years until being disbanded after just a handful of games this year.

Braves name Tates (Who?) Locke

The National Basketball Association Buffalo Braves Thursday named assistant coach and chief scout Tates Locke as the team's new head coach.

Locke, 38, who had served in his former capacity for the past season, became the team's fourth head coach in its six seasons. He replaced Jack Ramsay, who was told earlier this week his contract would not be renewed after the Braves lost an Eastern Conference semifinal playoff series to the Boston Celtics.

Rentzel to work off marijuana fine

Lance Rentzel, former Los Angeles Rams' wide receiver who admitted to marijuana possession two years ago, was ordered Thursday to donate 100 hours of volunteer work at a boys' club. Rentzel said he was unable to pay the $2,000 fine which was assessed in May, 1973. He had pleaded guilty to the charge and other counts of furnishing marijuana and illegal possession of codeine were dismissed at the time . . . Ken Holtzman and Bobby Grich were among 10 unsigned Baltimore players continuing negotiations with General Manager Hank Peters seeking to have their 20 per cent salary slashes restored because the Orioles returned a similar pay cut to Reggie Jackson . . .

Check the cleanliness of all your car's windows every time you start out — as a safety measure, if not for appearance's sake. Plain dirt is easy enough to remove with water or a household glass cleaner. For more stubborn spots, including bug splatters, you can purchase a commercial automobile window cleaner. On a long trip, it is wise to take along a container of the fluid, plus clean rags, or paper towels, for on the road cleaning. Vinyl upholstery contains some substances that may vaporize and form a film on interior glass surfaces. Remove with white vinegar diluted with an equal amount of water.

Customer satisfaction is a tradition at RAY OLDSMOBILE, 501 Busse Hwy., Park Ridge! Our 20 factory-trained technicians work full time to make sure that every car brought to us is carefully repaired and serviced. Our parts department inventory is one of the most extensive in the Chicago area, and we are #1 in retail sales. When you bring your GM car to RAY OLDS, Service Managers George Orth and Roger Nick check through to make sure everything is done to your satisfaction. Free loaner cars are available while your car is being repaired. (call ahead to reserve your loaner). We are open Mondays through Fridays from 7 A.M. until 6 P.M. Call us at 696-3200.

Hawks run in region track meet

The Harper Junior College track team will be in Moline this weekend for the Region IV qualifying meet, with the ultimate goal the Juco nationals in Houston, Tex. beginning May 20.

The Region IV meet starts today at Black Hawk College.

Harper's Hawks, coached by Bob Nolan, will be hosting the N4C league meet May 13 on their own Palatine campus.

But first comes regional qualifying and Nolan figures he has at least a couple of athletes who could do well enough to earn their way to Houston.

Premier among them is freshman discus thrower Bob Roels, a Rolling Meadows High School graduate who, Nolan feels, should finish either first or second in the region. Qualifying distance is 152 feet.

"I think Roels has a real good chance of qualifying," said Nolan. "He's been throwing well lately."

Roels also puts the shot but his best event is the discus.

Harper's Mark Kaufman will be trying to qualify in the distance events — either the three-mile or the six-mile. Hawk miler Augie Ziccarelli and 880-man Rick Reithal will also be shooting for a spot.

Randy Gray, Grant McNerney and Bob Maslin have a chance to qualify in the pole vault for Harper. Hurdler Jim Lemke and long jumper George McCahey will also be competing with an eye on the nationals.

Doug Gabbert will be entered in the decathlon for the Hawks.

Nolan's crew will play host to the rest of the teams in the N4C Juco conference meet at Harper, beginning at 3 p.m. next Thursday.

Much of the competition that the Hawks bump up against this weekend will be on hand next week for the league meet.

Sting off to fast start

Tightened division races, encouraging crowds, and exciting overtime games highlighted the week in the North American Soccer League.

A three way tie for first place in the Northern Division (Chicago, Hartford and Toronto), three points separating the top three teams in the West, a two-point gap between first and second in the East and undefeated Dallas stretching out a five-point lead over the tightly bunched followers in the South are the way the divisions after the third weekend of games in the NASL.

the top three teams in the West, a the tightly bunched followers in the South are the way the divisions stand

Chicago's two overtime wins moved them into a tie for the lead in the North. Steve Peplow, the NASL player of the week, contributed both goals in the Sting's 2-1 overtime win over New York before a Cosmos' record crowd of 28,436 in Yankee Stadium. Peplow had contributed an assist on the Sting's overtime goal early in the week which defeated Toronto 1-0.

Toronto bounced back with a 4-1 win over Hartford on Sunday bringing the three teams even in the standings, Eusebio scored twice for the Metros.

Dallas remained the only undefeated team in the league by defeating Southern Division rival San Jose 3-1 in Dallas. The Earthquake's goal was the first scored against Dallas and Ken Cooper this season but the lead in the division more than made up for that. Los Angeles, San Antonio and San Diego are bunched two points behind San Jose. George Best's goal and assist defeated the Jaws 2-0 on Sunday. San Diego had earlier upset the Earthquakes in San Jose 1-0 on a goal by Archie Roboostoff, a former Earthquake. A near-capacity crowd of 18,037 saw the game.

'Dr. Kissinger, the hour is late'

Jim Murray

The United States of America, which used to win wars and Olympic Games with equal ease and regularity, is not only getting kicked out of Southeast Asia and parts of Turkey and Africa these days, the next thing we know she may lose the shot put.

Jim Bush, the crack coach for UCLA, thinks we're lagging so far in such traditional American victory marches as the sprints, hurdles, shot put, pole vault and middle distance runs that we should go to Montreal with a white flag.

Jim is particularly depressed that the Congress of the United States — which seems to be in the business of reversing the colonial war cry to make it now read "Billions for tribute but not one penny for defense!" — has not been called upon to put up money for athletics in this country, while foreigners are not only subsidized but given bonuses for achieveing certain marks in competition.

The situation is so grave, it occurred to me that what is really needed here is detente — an athletic detente. We should go to the negotiating table with a view to minimizing our losses. Arrange, so speak, for a Strategic Leg Limitation Treaty.

I would assume the CIA has men on other various track teams around the world and what is needed is a crash course in track and field for Dr. Kissinger, who doesn't look to me as if he's had much acquaintance with this area of jockstrap diplomacy. We will have him briefed by our man from Kiev, Double Agent Double O:

O—"Dr. Kissinger, the hour is late, the situation is serious, what is your policy for the 10,000 — the decathlon?"

Dr. K — "The What?"

O—"The 10,000. It's a 6-mile race. the decathlon is a 10-event brickbreaker, a combination of the Chinese water treatment and a horse-whipping."

Dr. K — "Well, I'm not sure if anything should be done. Are the Russians taking it over? Cuban mercenaries infiltrating?"

O—"Well, they're using satellite countries cleverly as usual. The East Germans will pick up anything the Russians leave lying around. They are only 19 million people but 18 million of them turn out to be high jumpers, pole vaulters, marathon runners, javelin throwers and shot putters. Poland is full of Pole vaulters. Africa is full of guys who can run for three days without water."

Dr. K — "Africa? Are any of them from Angola? And do they speak Spanish?"

O—"I don't know where-all they're from but in the background you always see these guys in fur hats and stopwatches and they all look like Akim Tamiroff and eat borscht with their hats on."

Dr. K — "Donnerwetter!"

O—"Exactly. Now, look, Hank. You got us out of Vietnam with wheat, eh? How about if we give the Russkis a few billion more tons or whatever if they let us out of the 10,000?"

Dr. K — "But, Butz will have a fit!"

O—"But, maybe they'll call off the Cuban track team! Maybe the Polish weight lifters will develop hernias. Those Russian doctors can do anything with dissidents. Just ask Solzhenitsyn. Tell them it might cost them the election. Lie a little."

Dr. K — "What lie? That might be the most truthful thing I tell them."

O—"I got it! How about if we start some agitation on their home front? You know, demonstrations in the street, demanding that they withdraw from the 5000? Get Borzov to return his gold medals to the Kremlin in protest of its inhuman treatment of the American women and children on the track team. Get him to burn his skivvies in Red Square! Appeal to their conscience!"

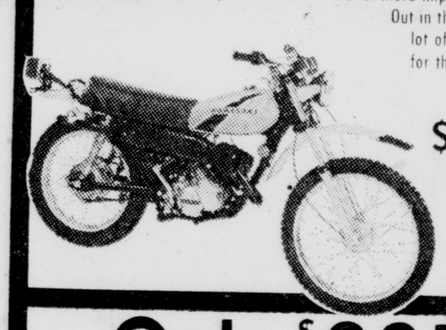

Dr. K (shaking his head) — "It'll never work. We tried that in Czechoslovakia. We provoke them too much, they'll send tanks. No, I'm afraid we're just up against the flow of history. It's just their turn on the international stage."

O—"But, Hank! It's not fair! They draft athletes! Ours have to run after work with dogs chasing them, cops stopping them and the neighbors throwing things at them. We're going into this thing not even trying to win!"

Dr. K — "So, what else is new?"

Bad weather and no pitch make Chisox a dull staff

From Herald wire services

Paul Richards could be pleasantly surprised by his White Sox pitching staff, if he ever gets a chance to see it.

The Sox got in one game of the opening series, one of the next and had to postpone four others because of rain, cold and one day even because of snow. The result was that Wilbur Wood, a time-tested starter, was on the mound for half of the first 12 games and everybody else took a rest, more or less.

Rich Gossage, for instance, had a 14-day lapse. Dave Hamilton got out once in 22 days. Terry Forster had 13 days between starts.

"When we finished training camp," Richards said, "I thought we could have a pretty good staff. Gossage and Forster impressed me with strong arms, and Wood has been great.

"But with all the rainouts, the layoffs sure don't help anybody. I wanted to see some of the young kids, like Pete Vuckovich, Jesse Jefferson and Jack Kucek, but there hasn't been a chance.

"Once we get in rotation, we should be all right. But meanwhile working in the bullpen isn't the same as working in a game and they can't get ready for game work."

Both Gossage and Forster proved the manager correct in their first starts after their layoffs. Gossage walked the first two men he faced, gave up three runs in the first inning, and then was strong until he was relieved. Forster was strong for six innings and then got into trouble because he was tired.

The latter pair have been the biggest boost to Richards' staff. Both were highly effective relievers the last two seasons, but Richards quickly put them in starting roles.

"Both of them have strong arms," he said, "and it makes more sense to me to start them than put them in the bullpen. What sense is there in using a pitcher like Forster in relief if you have to put him in when you're three or four runs behind.

"Start him and if he's going to get behind, let him do it himself and work his way out of it."

Richards, whose debut in the major leagues as a catcher was in 1932 with Brooklyn, serves as his own pitching coach and doesn't mind if a fireballer such as Forster or Gossage gets high with a pitch.

"That's a fallacy," he said, "that a pitcher should keep it low. Some pitchers, if they have the speed, like Forster, can throw it high. Dizzy Dean threw high all through his career and I've seen plenty of home runs off low pitches.

"You hear all the radio announcers talking about getting a pitch high. That doesn't mean a thing. A good fast ball pitcher can throw it high past the batter."

Bart Johnson, regarded as the fourth starter on the White Sox staff, also has speed, but he has been ineffective so far, to Richards' disappointment. "He was great in the spring," Richards said, "but he hasn't shown much since the season started.

"I think his trouble is mental. When he gets out there, for some reason he hasn't been pitching the way I know he can. I don't know the solution, except for him to work it out himself."

If Johnson does, it could be a big boost. He had a 10-4 record with the White Sox in 1974 with an earned run average of 2.74, and then missed the entire 1975 season because of a knee injury.

This year he's been working regularly and maybe if he puts it all together in one game, it would solve his problem.

If he does, the White Sox might be a late challenger for the divisional title.

Midlane hosts amateur event

Midlane Country Club will play host to the 10th annual Northern Illinois Amateur golf tournament June 28 - 30.

The course, located west of Waukegan, will present plenty of challenges to some of the state's top amateurs.

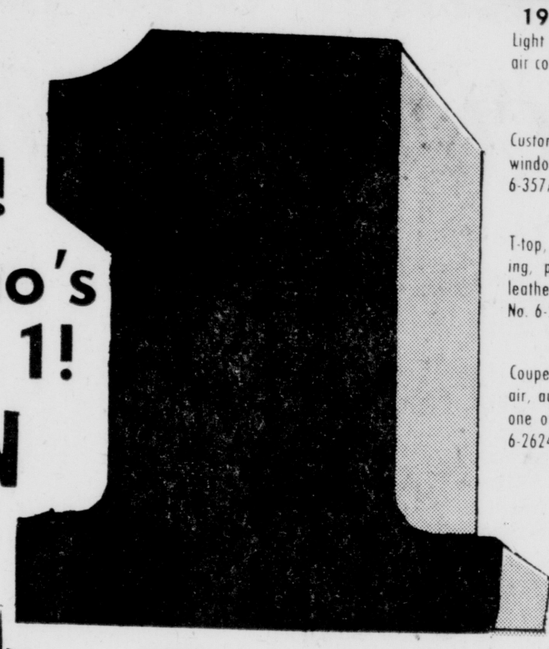

The tournament is open to men with a six or less handicap. The entry deadline is June 18.

There will be 18-hole play on Monday and Tuesday with the low 40 scores and ties playing the final 18 on Wednesday.

The low 32 scores will qualify for the Illinois State Match Play championship Aug. 9-11 at Mission Hills Country club in Northbrook.

Those interested in becoming known as one of Illinois' top players can enter the Northern Amateur by contacting Merritt Cook, Sr., c/o Cook's Sportscraft Co., 5214 West Irving Park Rd., Chicago, Ill. 60641 or by calling him any afternoon at 283-9000.

Fight show was insult; reader hits Ali and ABC

Fan's forum

Who does ABC-TV think they're kidding? And who does Muhammad Ali think he's dealing with, a bunch of morons? That boxing match on television Friday night was an insult to the viewing public, not to mention the millions of hard-core fight fans.

In the old days, when boxing was a weekly feature on TV, there were plenty of light-heavyweight fights that were more interesting than the supposed heavyweight title fight Friday. Since the days of Patterson-Liston-Ali, most title bouts were considered too hot to televise on home TV, so now that ABC gets the rights to one, they give it the big hype.

But ABC must have known something. They must have known that this wasn't going to be anything special — that it was going to be dull, in fact. And Ali didn't have the good sense to even get in shape for the fight. In that regard he showed absolutely no respect for his many fans, some of whom have been waiting a decade to see him fight.

Ali and ABC are doing a lot to kill off boxing.

THANKS FOR STANDINGS

Dear Editor:

My thanks to the Herald sports department for including major league standings in the paper. It's about time you recognized the existence of baseball.

A MONDAY HITTER

Fans Forum:

The hitting so far this season of Rick Monday has shown that the Cubs would have been really dumb to trade him like they wanted to do before the season started. Monday is the team's most consistent hitter and probably the most powerful home run hitter, so I still wonder why they ever wanted to trade him off.

Not only is Monday the best hitter on the team and the leader in RBIs, he is also the top fielder in the outfield with the surest glove and he is probably a faster runner than either Cardenal or Morales.

Furthermore, the Cubs have the only real American patriot in the major leagues in Monday, who singlehandedly saved an American flag from being burned in Los Angeles. How many teams can claim that? Monday's flag-saving heroics caused national headlines and earned his team, state and city a lot of recognition.

Thank God for Rick Monday.

Mrs. William Wacheau
Des Plaines

EDITOR'S NOTE: The only thing the Cubs could use more than a homer-hitting patriot is a starting pitcher who has an ERA under 5.00 and takes his shower after the game — not during it.

OPEN SUNDAY

Join us for an

OPEN HOUSE

at Talman Woodfield

1010 N. Meacham Rd., Schaumburg (west of the Mall)

Monday May 10 through Saturday May 15

Top row: Arthur Erdmann, Laurel Irven, Dorothy Felders, Karen Hunter

We're happy to be able to bring Talman's specialized financial services closer to those of you who live and work in the Northwest Suburban area. Now we'd like to know you, and we'd like you to know us.

So we're having an Open House at Talman Woodfield. Come in and visit us—enjoy coffee and donuts and meet our officers and staff. We look forward to welcoming old friends here as well as making new ones. And while you are here, receive a handsome reminder of your visit, a special Talman key ring.

WIN A NIGHT OUT. During this Open House week, and exclusively at this Talman branch office, we offer you a chance to share in some of the excellent dining facilities of the Northwest Chicagoland area. Over 25 pairs of dinner certificates for local restaurants will be awarded daily. There are no eligibility requirements. Just stop in and register. Winners of each day's drawing will be posted, and certificates sent out by mail. There will be a new drawing every day. If you like, come in and register daily—so if you don't win one day you may win the next.

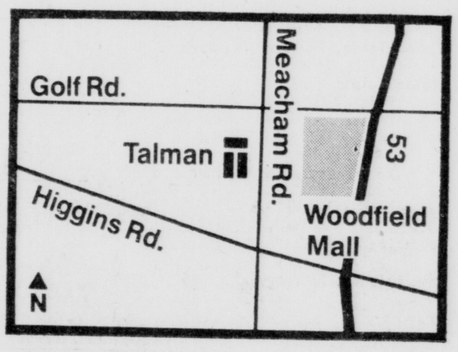

At the end of the week, all entries will be eligible for a grand prize drawing—a luxury weekend for two at the Arlington Park Hilton.

HEAR OLD TOWN SINGERS. Friday evening, enjoy the Old Town School of Folk Music's Singing Troupe in a program of musical entertainment. They will be in our lobby from 5 to 8 PM presenting a medley of American folk songs.

We think you will like this new Talman office because of its convenience and the many financial services available here. It will be our pleasure to welcome you to Talman Woodfield any time, but especially during this Open House week.

Bicentennial shopping list

Many kinds of red, white and blue flowers are easy to grow from seeds, and plant growers will also be ready to meet the Bicentennial demand. You have several options for celebrating the Bicentennial with patriotic flower gardens, according to the National Garden Bureau:

- Different kinds of flowers arranged for compatible heights and season of bloom.
- Different varieties within the same kind of flower, either mixed or planted separately in patterns.
- Special Bicentennial tri-color seed blends.

Here are two lists of kinds of red, white and blue flowers. List No. 1 contains early planted, cool loving flowers. List No. 2 contains summer planted, heat resistant flowers. By selecting kinds of flowers from one list only, you are assured that all three colors of flowers will be in bloom at the same time:

*Starred varieties of reds will produce eithe a dazzling firetruck scarlet or an intense deep red; either would be satisfactory for a "flag" red. Starred blues come in varieties that will produce a deep violet, which is about as close as you can come to the navy blue of Old Glory. Reds not starred grade toward blusih red or crimson; non-starred blues grade toward medium or light blue.

Six kinds of annual flowers regularly grown as separate colors by seedsmen, produce all three "flag colors":

Aster, Cornflower, Larkspur, Petunia, Sweet pea, and Verbena.

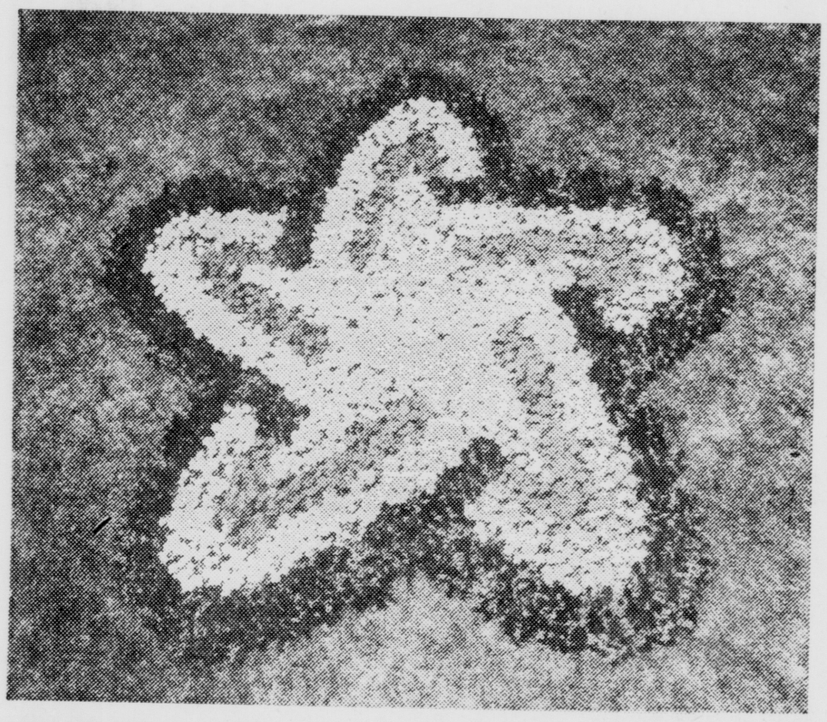

Special Bicentennial tri-color seed mixtures are being sold to grow cornflowers, petunias and verbenas. Grow a large bed of any one of these and revel in color all summer long.

LIST NO. 1: FAST GROWING, COOL LOVING FLOWERS

Show off patriotic plants

Pattern plantings are most effective if you choose plants of the same height and display them tilted-up on a slope or on a site where you can look down on the bed. The most successful patterns are grown using three colors of the same kind of flower so that plant sizes and foliage textures harmonize. Painted bricks or field stones can be used to outline and emphasize patterns, especially when the flowers are young and have not yet filled in. Or, you can "draw lines" with one of the neat silver perennials, such as santolina or artemesia and fill in with red, white and blue flowers. 'Dark Opal' Basil, a purple-bronze foliage plant, can also be used to "draw lines."

If you can't "tilt up" your flower beds to show all three colors, "stair-step" plant heights with white flowers in the middle:

Low "edging" flowers in the front

Medium height "bedding" flowers in the center

Tall "background" flowers behind the shorter kinds

Stick with simple patterns; a colonial flag with thirteen stars is a mighty ambitious undertaking. But if you have the space and feel like investing time in creating a neighborhood conversation piece, then take a typical American approach. Think big! Think of square yards of dazzling red, clean white, and flag blue. Be as creative as you like, for in our Bicentennial year each person will be celebrating our heritage in his own. way. Then, when the celebration is over, you won't be stuck with discarding a lot of expensive decorations. Spent flowers can be composed and returned to the soil for next year's garden.

How to achieve lawns of beauty

A healthy lawn is more than a thing of beauty. Nothing else does so fine a job of carpeting soil while still allowing water and nutrients to reach tree roots and shrub roots in the soil below.

And a well established lawn is easier than ever to maintain. Power-driven mowers and trimmers have taken the backache out of grooming. Selective weed-killers have eliminated hours of toil on hands-and-knees. The application of modern fungicides and insecticides can prevent or cure lawn diseases and infestations that have mystified lawn-lovers for years.

Automatic sprinkling systems — some incorporating moisture-sensing devices — remember to irrigate when you are on vacation, or when you get too busy to maintain a watering schedule. Application of scientifically balanced nutrients is fast and easy, with a large choice of plant foods available especially for turf grasses.

But even with all of these aids, some lawns are thin, spotty or brown when others in the same neighborhood are a joy to behold. Why? Lack of lawn vigor doesn't just happen. A lawn is quick to tell you when it lacks water, is being attacked by insects or weeds or is becoming diseased.

A lawn is equally quick to respond to proper or curative care. All that is needed is your recognition that something is wrong, proper diagnosis of the problem and immediate action.

If the subsoil has been properly prepared and the lawn has been evenly planted with grasses suited to the climate and soil conditions in your area, virtually all lawn problems can be traced to one or a combination of the following four factors:

• When grass isn't getting enough water it goes through a recognizable series of changes. First, the turf loses its springiness. (As a general rule, if you can see footprints after you walk across the lawn, it needs water.) Secondly, the grass turns a bluish, lusterless green that eventually turns to a straw-color. A good soaking will revive a lawn that has lost its springiness or turned bluish, but tissue that has taken on a straw-color can't be saved.

However, the roots of yellow turf may still be alive, and a thorough watering may bring forth new blade growth.

Given time, additional care and more conscientious watering, such a lawn may revive completely.

• Lawns show their need for nutrients by growing more slowly and by losing some of their color. As a turf thins out, weeds gain a foothold. There is no such thing as a healthy lawn that continually feeds itself from soil alone without fertilizing. Remember: every time you cut a lawn you are harvesting a crop and removing nutrients. To keep a lawn healthy and strong, feed it regularly with a balanced nutrient mix. Golf-course superintendents and other lawn experts agree that a prospering lawn should be fed every four to six weeks during the growing season.

• Weed control is the biggest single problem facing lawn-lovers. In general, weeds or other unwanted plant growth in your lawn fall into two categories: grasses and broad-leaved weeds. Fortunately, there are excellent chemical controls for both types.

• Insect control is a subject as broad as it is important in lawn culture, because of the variety of insects that attack lawns and the agents available to fight them. Among the more important pests that you should watch for are snails, cinch bugs, cutworms and leafhoppers. Among the products available for control of these and other pests are some that combine their insecticides with a fertilizer.

Safety hints

As a precautionary measure, paint or wrap with white tape the upper two to three inches of bamboo stakes. This makes them easier to see when bending over and thus could save you serious injury to the face and neck.

Traps should not be the "mouse trap" type, but a drop cage. This reduces the chances of a child getting hurt and also the caught animal can be removed to a deserted location rather than being killed.

Never lay tools such as rakes, hoes, spades, shovels, etc on the ground. Always try leaning them against something so no one will trip or step on one. Always store the tools hanging up. And always keep the sharp edges hanging or pointing down and towards the wall.

Soil conditions important to health of birch trees

Birch trees are popular and attractive, but they're often shortlived in Illinois, says Floyd Giles, University of Illinois Extension horticulturist.

This problem can be reduced by selecting some of the more easily grown birches and planting them in the right locations.

A cool, moist, well-drained soil is the key to growing healthy birch, Giles says. Birch trees need full sun to grow well, so the trees should be located where their tops will be in sun for part of the day.

If you plant paper birch in a hot, dry area, it loses vigor and is soon attacked by the bronze birch borer. This insect feeds on the inner bark and eventually girdles and kills all the branches.

The European birch is even more susceptible to borers than the paper birch. For this reason, Giles usually recommends paper birch over European birch. However, there are some European birch varieties that make interesting specimens when planted in cool, moist soil.

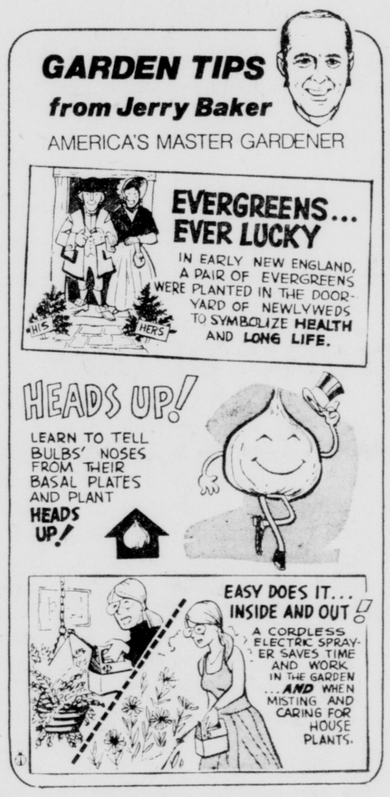

The Weeping and the fine-textured Cutleaf Weeping European birches both have gracefully dropping branches. The Purple Splendor European birch has purple summer foliage, and the leaves of the Scarlet Glory birch are red in spring and fall, and reddish-green in summer.

If you want to plant birch in a spot that's less desirable, use river birch, Giles advises. River birch is native to the sandy river bottoms of Illinois and thrives in warm soil. It's much more resistant to birch borer damage, and it is the only birch that tolerates wet, poorly drained, or extremely dry soils.

River birch bark is tinted pink or orange, and it peels much more than that of paper birch. A tough, beautiful tree like this deserves to be planted more often, Giles says.

All of the birches have yellow fall color, but the beautiful, clear, golden-yellow of the paper birch is superior to the others, says Giles.

Birch trees usually are sold only in spring. They are "packaged" with a ball of earth around their roots. To plant, remove any plastic or plastic twine from around the root ball and plant the tree no deeper than the top of the ball. At planting time, any broken or conflicting branches should be pruned back to the main trunk. But don't head back the main leader. Water the tree after it is planted and then at regular intervals until it becomes established.

Keep mower blade razor sharp

by BILL MEACHEM

One of the things that people often forget to do in the spring is to have the mower blade sharpened. And I'm no exception.

A lot is written each year about fertilizing and liming the lawn and as a passing remark it is advised to have the mower blade sharpened. But, having a sharp blade on a mower can be just as important to the welfare of the lawn as fertilizing. I know that this is a broad statement and some folks may disagree. But, let's look at just what happens to the grass blades when they are "hacked" as opposed to being cut off.

Most gardeners today use a rotary lawn mower. The blade is spinning at a good clip and it cuts the blades of grass like we did years ago when we cut tall grass with a sickle. But I remember watching old timers use a scythe and sickle years ago and they all had a sharpening stone in their back pocket. Every now and then they would stop to hone up the edge of the cutting blade.

If they didn't, they would have had to use a lot more muscle to hack the grass rather than cut it cleanly. When we use a power mower we don't have to worry about our muscles, the little one-cylinder engine takes care of that for us. But, a dull blade is still hacking — not cutting.

When a grass blade is hacked it leaves a ragged edge. If you don't believe me, look at the end of a grass blade under a magnifying glass after you have cut the lawn. It will look torn. Now, this torn edge has to heal. We all know that the healing process in humans is much faster when a cut is clean. So it is with grass. Take another look at the grass blades two days after cutting. Chances are you won't even have to use a magnifying glass to see the brown tips. This is a result of hacking with a dull blade. No amount of fertilizer or water will change this — only sharpening the blade will.

You can sharpen your own blade with a file, but once a year it would be wise to have a serviceman grind it sharp. At the same time he will balance the blade. A blade that is out of balance will play havoc with the engine on the mower.

A note of caution, though. When working on the mower blade be sure to disconnect the sparkplug wire. A spin of the blade could start the engine if the plug wire is still connected.

One of the advantages of a rotary mower is that it will cut the tall stalks of weeds that are sometimes left when mowing with the old reel mowers — like the hand jobs I used to push as a kid for a quarter an hour.

This constant cutting will eliminate some weeds, but there are others that hug the ground for which you will need some form of weed control. If you can get at the weeds early enough you can keep them from getting out of hand. A can of spot weed killer is a handy way to give individual weeds a squirt as you mow.

On the subject of weeds, if at all possible I like to prevent them from growing rather than have to put up with them later. We all know there are crabgrass preventers which are applied in the early spring to prevent crabgrass from sprouting. Now, I understand, there is a chemical that can be put on the flower and vegetable beds in spring that will prevent weeds from growing throughout the whole summer. It's still very new but I'm going to get some to experiment with this summer. Of course, it means that all flowers and vegetables will have to be put out as plants, not seeds, but this should be no problem. I'm also thinking how great this would be under my barberry hedge which I hate to weed because of the thorns.

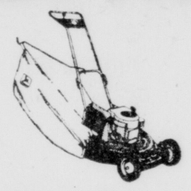

Analyze soil for success

The acid/alkaline content of your soil need not be a complex problem, although it is a highly important factor in successful growing, according to the American Association of Nurserymen.

Most plants thrive in soil that is slightly acid to neutral or slightly alkaline. Where the acid content is too high, lime can be added to the soil for balance, and where the alkaline content is extreme, sulfur may be used.

If you want to have your soil analyzed, samples may be tested at the state agricultural experiment station, or you may conduct a simple test yourself by purchasing an inexpensive testing kit from your nursery garden center.

SOMETIMES IT HELPS to have a ready reference when it comes to planting the family vegetable garden. Here's a seed depth, row spacing guide to help you plan this year's successful garden. Some varieties may vary slightly, but for early, basic planning, try this guide.

Pin Oak trees and other trees such as Magnolia typically suffer from iron chlorosis in the Chicago area. Treatment should take place right now when sap is moving vigorously in the tree. A yellowing of leaves with veins remaining green is evidence of this condition. It is caused by a lack of available iron. This is usually caused by alkaline soil tying up this important element. Pin Oaks like growing in a forest condition in a loose, acid soil.

Homeowners and arborists wait until the tree shows these symptoms and the real prime time for most effective treatment may have passed. One can use following methods all season but early spring is most effective.

Procedures to follow are:

Feed tree with an iron chelate (Sequestrene) and/or a plant food with iron and acidizing agent (Miracid is an example.) These can be foliar and soil applications.

Use root feeders with iron cartridges.

If tree is too ravaged to respond to the above, a product called "medicaps" can be inserted into the trunk. Easy to do and tree "greens up" within days. The above usual maintenance practices should supplement this procedure each year.

Many landscapers and arborists are prepared to treat trees at reasonable cost. Richard Price, president-elect of Illinois Landscape Contractors Association, says, "The Pin Oak is a real speciman tree which should have a lush green color in summer and deep crimson in autumn. A chlorotic Pin Oak just looks sick and eventually dies completely. All of us should attempt to save these majestic beauties."
